

6^d

PUNCH OR THE LONDON CHARIEAT—WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 6 1950

6^d

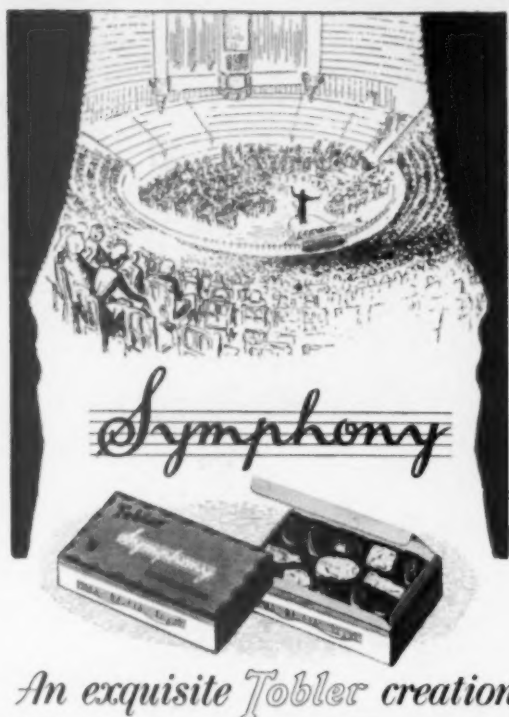

PUNCH OFFICE
10 BOUVERIE STREET LONDON E.C.4

IMPERIAL LEATHER
HAND-FINISHED
Toilet Soaps

All who are sensitive to the finer shades of quality delight in Cussons hand finished Imperial Leather Toilet Soaps.

CUSSONS BONS & CO. LTD, 4, BROOK ST, GROSVENOR SQ, LONDON, W.1

Symphony

An exquisite Tobler creation

TOO-WHIT, TOO-WHOO

WHAT ABOUT YOU!

You really do sleep when you have 'all-over-the-bed' warmth on wintry nights. Simply set the control and the Windak gives its cosy warmth as long as you want it.

You sleep on it as there is no danger from its harmless voltage, and the new Windak heating element provides positive protection against over-heating when in bed.

THE NEW

ELECTRIC
'ALL-OVER-THE-BED' SAFETY
BLANKET

We shall be pleased to forward the name of your nearest stockist

WINDAK LIMITED · WOODSIDE · POYNTON · CHESHIRE

Careful, brat!

... You are hearing the hopes, the longings, the gastronomic yearnings of twelve of your most discerning Elders. You are delivering, in short, One Dozen Bottles of Lembar. Treat them respectfully. Not every lemon barley water is made from pure lemon juice, deliciously mingled with the best, most mellow barley, judiciously sweetened to a flavour for the gods. No, indeed, but Lembar is Always remember that — always.

RAYNER'S
Lembar

Glucose Lembar from Chemists only.
Beverage Lembar from Grocers and Wine Merchants.

MADE BY RAYNER & COMPANY LTD · LONDON · N.18

THE IDEAL CHRISTMAS PRESENT

A New Silk Tie

Cut from the square
25/-

M. Lewin & Sons Ltd.

103, JERMYN STREET, ST. JAMES'S, S.W.1
ESTD. 1896 (Only Address) Tel.: WHItchall 4291

SHIRTMAKERS & TAILORS—SPECIALISTS IN CLUB COLOURS

WHAT FINER GIFT THAN

Finest Leather?

If you cannot visit us, we will gladly send on request a little book of Gift Ideas from whose pages you may order with confidence.

HIDE DOCUMENT AND "ALL-PURPOSE"
CASE £6. 6. 0.

JEWEL CASE: PIGSKIN £13. 10. 0.

LUXAN HIDE £12. 12. 0.

MAPPIN AND WEBB

LONDON SHOWROOMS

LIMITED

2 QUEEN VICTORIA ST., E.C.4. 156-162 OXFORD ST., W.1. 179 REGENT ST., W.1.
SHEFFIELD: SHOWROOMS, NORFOLK ST.
PARIS: BIARRITZ BUENOS AIRES RIO DE JANEIRO JOHANNESBURG BOMBAY

Christmas Party

What are they talking about?

No, they're not talking about Father Christmas. They're talking about Burrough's Gin. People who really understand, and really think about their gin drinks, always prefer Burrough's, because it is triple distilled. This extra refinement makes it soft, smooth and perfectly clean to the palate.

Delicious taken plain, Burrough's Gin also "keeps its place" in even the most delicate cocktails. Prices: 32/4 per bottle; 16/11 per half bottle.

ENJOYED SINCE 1820

BURROUGH'S Gin

BEEFEATER

IT IS TRIPLE DISTILLED!

JAMES BURROUGH LTD., 75, CALE DISTILLERY, HUTTON ROAD, S.E.11

Woven Bedcovers are more than enchanting—they're practical!

Vantona 'Court' Bedcovers are available in a choice of blue, rose, gold or green at prices from £5.2.6d. for 70"x100" to £10.15.0d. for 90"x108".

Write to the Vantona Household Advice Bureau which is at your service on all domestic matters
VANTONA TEXTILES LTD. 107 PORTLAND ST. MANCHESTER 1

Fashion leaders ordain the woven bedcover for its essential co-ordination of material, weaving craftsmanship, colour and design—refreshing attributes of the gracious décor of today. The designs of Vantona 'Court' bedcovers range from the classical to the contemporary; they combine artistic appeal with the practical virtues of durability, colour fastness and crease resistance. An additional bedcover will supply the housewife with curtains to match.

VANTONA

Court

BEDCOVERS

Horrockses

the Greatest Name in Cotton

For generations housewives have been proud to say their sheets, pillowcases and towels were made by HORROCKSES. The name commands respect in every woman's mind and shall ever stand for quality the world over.

SHEETS · PILLOWCASES · TOWELS · DRESS GOODS · FURNISHINGS · ETC.

HORROCKSES & CO. LTD. 107, PORTLAND ST., MANCHESTER 1

London's
Permanent Sales
Centre for Select from the best at

The London Bedding Centre

Another JOHN PERRING Enterprise

13 Brompton Rd, KNIGHTSBRIDGE S.W.3 Phone: KNI 1777

Main Furniture Showrooms KINGSTON-on-Thames (Opp. Bus Station) and Branches in the following towns

WORTHING
OXFORD
CHICHESTER

GUILDFORD
TOOTING
TWICKENHAM

STAINES
SLOUGH
READING

EAST SHEEN
WOKING
RICHMOND

JACKMANS Ltd
SOUTHEND
WOLVESLOW
GRAYS

All round the Clock

there's always time for

NESCAFÉ

Good coffee; with the full rich flavour, roaster-fresh fragrance! Yet so quick to make—put a spoonful of Nescafé in the cup, add near-boiling water. With Nescafé you're sure of perfect coffee every time. Nescafé retains all its strength and goodness, sealed in by the special Nestlé process until the touch of hot water releases it for your enjoyment.

ANOTHER OF NESTLÉ'S GOOD THINGS

51.C

British Biscuits
at their Best

Macfarlane Lang

By appointment
Biscuit Manufacturers to H.M. the King
Macfarlane, Lang & Co. Ltd.

E S T A B L I S H E D 1 8 1 7

Christmas cheer for 'kitchen captives'

If life seems to consist of endless hours in the kitchen, now's the time to get your release—and here's how: Give yourself a 'Prestige' Pressure Cooker this Christmas. It will cook in minutes meals that now take hours. It will cook them better because all the flavour and goodness is preserved. And it will save you money because the 'Prestige' uses so much less fuel. If you're doubtful—ask any woman who owns one; better still, ask your local store or ironmonger to show you the complete 'Prestige' range.

PRESTIGE 'COMMODORE'

A large family size model for the preparation of big meals and for bottling fruit and vegetables. Fitted with 3-way pressure control and possesses all usual 'Prestige' features for safety and simplicity. Price, complete with Recipe and Instruction Book and measure. 84/-

Other models from 72/6

Prestige pressure cookers

Save 75% time—75% fuel and ALL the flavour.

Fashions change but the well-dressed woman remains unchanging in her choice of Aristoc stockings to match their elegance against good clothes. And if she loves the finer things of life she asks for Aristoc nylons... they put in a rare but regular appearance at most good shops.

THE ARISTOCRAT OF STOCKINGS

Swan Shoes

DL 166
87/6

DL 167
87/6

Two Bootee models with warm fleecy lining. Styled by Swan for winter wear, and fashioned by fine craftsmen. Swan Shoes are sold at the better shoe shops and stores throughout the United Kingdom.

For men's shoes by CROCKETT & JONES LTD., NORTHAMPTON ask for Health Brand

CVR 100

Longines
THE WORLD'S MOST HONOURED WATCH

BAUME & CO. LTD., London and La Chaux-de-Fonds

Gifts

Lavender water for Aunt Maud, socks for Uncle Henry. But surely you can choose better than that? Christmas shoppers find the Stores a veritable Aladdin's cave at this time of year. So here are some suggestions for Weeping Princesses

Fine Irish linen or lawn handkerchiefs—for instance, 4 in a box for 3/5/6 (but there are lots to choose from)

for Jovial Barons

Christmas Boxes in three sizes, £2. 10. 0, 5 gns. and 10 gns. Bottled chicken, Xmas pudding, glace fruits—everything. Or various gift cases of wines and spirits, from £2. 2. 3 to £5

for Bearded Villains

—a new shaving brush at say 7/6/-? A pair of military hair-brushes for £3 completes the transformation

for the Dame

A 5-in-1 handbag (change the cover and the colour!) 4/6/9; or a cylindrical Tartan knitting bag costs 14/9

for Cinderella

Slippers—soft leather moccasins in red, brown, blue or green (with leather soles) 2/3/9

for Trap-door Demons

—a mellow cloud of smoke from our own famous Turkish and Virginian cigarettes. 50 Ayia Solouk (Turkish) cost 14/11, and 100 Finest 'Blue' (Virginian) 26/-

for the Principal Boy

Gloves—for example, tan leather, seamless, wool lining (sizes 8-9½) at 22/9

for Minor Characters

Noiseless roller skates! Rubber tyred, adjustable, 3/6/8; de luxe, 44/-. Bicycles, tricycles and pedal cars. Or maybe a Coronet box camera with built-in Synchro-flash attachment at £2. 5. 4

Please write for your copy of our Christmas catalogue

Army & Navy Stores

EVERYTHING FOR EVERYONE

VICTORIA STREET SW1 • VICTORIA 1254

5 minutes from Victoria Station with a Jacqmar scarf you are First in Fashion

Give smartly this Christmas. Choose one of the original designs at

Jacqmar

16 GROSVENOR STREET LONDON W.1

and leading fashion houses throughout the country

Feel the difference

A Mason Pearson really brushes!

Mason Pearson
Brothers,
97 to 100, Piccadilly
London, W.1.

Such a thorough brushing, such a delightful feeling of comfort, such an improvement in the appearance, as the Mason Pearson goes through your hair—sweeping out dust and dandruff, massaging the scalp, smoothing tangles, restoring your hair-style just as you like it! Mason Pearson, the original pneumatic rubber cushion hair brushes, were patented in 1885. They are available in attractive colours. Prices range from 21/- to 55/- including Purchase Tax. A cleaner is supplied with each brush. Ask at your chemist, hairdresser or store.

MASON PEARSON

London England

...and I remembered the 'THREE CASTLES'
Party all set ... for rather particular people ...
Sherry party? Guess again ... Sherry-cum-Three Castles party? That's better much, much better.

The
"THREE CASTLES" Cigarettes

20 for 3/10

Made by W. D. & H. O. WILLS, Branch of The Imperial Tobacco Co. (of Great Britain & Ireland), Ltd. T7232C

But why should a watch be waterproof?

ORDINARY people don't get their watches wet—so why should the Rolex technicians have struggled to perfect the famous Rolex Oyster? Because a waterproof watch is more accurate. Its sealed case protects it from dirt and dust, as well as from water.

The Rolex Oyster uses the only really safe method of waterproofing—the self-sealing action of one metallic surface on another. This gives the delicate, accurate Rolex movement the protection it deserves... makes it one of the few superlative watches in the world.

ROLEX

World's first waterproof wrist-watch

Presenting—the Rolex Oyster. Permanently, perfectly sealed against water, dust, damp or dirt the perfect movement with the perfect protection.

THE ROLEX WATCH COMPANY LIMITED (H. Wilsdorf, Governing Director)
1 GREEN STREET, MAYFAIR, W.1

Here is the set by which all

TELEVISION is judged!

The H.M.V. '1806'

... fitted with the magnificent 15-inch aluminised Emiscope tube... what really outstanding pictures it gives even in full daylight... it has no equal in Television today. Even its luxurious craftsman-built cabinet is in a class of its own. If you can afford it there can be no other choice.

- Daylight viewing and brilliant reproduction on the incomparable 15-inch Emiscope aluminised tube.
- HARD GLASS Tube which alone permits the exacting processing for maximum performance and longest life.
- Simple—easy-to-handle controls.
- Typical H.M.V. 'quality' cabinet—a worthy addition to any home.
- EASY H.P. TERMS ARE AVAILABLE WHEN DESIRED.

THE FINEST TELEVISION IN THE WORLD

Model 1806
(London Frequency)
Model 1806
(Midlands Frequency)
£197.4.11 Tax paid.

Model 1851 (offr Midlands Frequency) is similar but incorporates also a 9-cube, 9-waveband radio receiver. Price £197.0.11 Tax paid.

The Master's Voice

SEND COUPON
FOR DETAILS
OF ALL H.M.V.
MODELS

TO DEPT (P), THE GRAMOPHONE CO. LTD., HAYES, MIDDLESEX

NAME

ADDRESS

For Christmas . . .

Make friends with Martell
COGNAC

BRANDY FOR CHRISTMAS means MARTELL

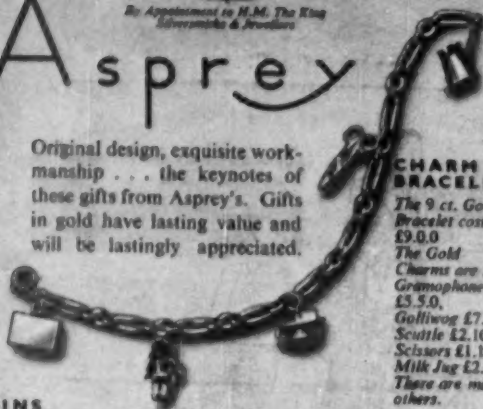

THREE STAR

CORDON BLEU

Asprey

By Appointment to H.M. The King
Jewellers & Silversmiths

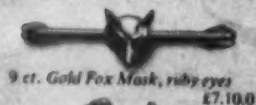

Original design, exquisite workmanship . . . the keynotes of these gifts from Asprey's. Gifts in gold have lasting value and will be lastingly appreciated.

CHARM BRACELET

The 9 ct. Gold Bracelet costs £9.0.0
The Gold Charms are:
Gramophone £5.5.0,
Golfing £7.2.6
Scullie £2.10.0,
Scully £1.17.6
Milk Jug £2.5.0
There are many others.

PINS

9 ct. Gold Fox Mask, ruby eyes £7.10.0

9 ct. Gold Terrier £7.10.0

9 ct. Gold Tie Clip and Chain £6.10.0

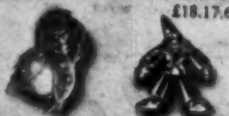

SCATTER PINS

Gold and Peridot Dragonfly £24.0.0

Gold and Tourmaline Pierrot or Pierrot £18.17.6

Gold and Moonstone Beetle £16.5.0

9ct. Gold Cuckoo P.O.B. Watch £97.10.0

9ct. Gold Lipstick Case with mirror £37.0.0

9ct. Gold Ruby set Cigarette Holder £79.15.0

10ct. Gold Toothpick £7.12.6

9ct. Gold Cigar Piercer £4.17.6

9ct. Gold Zodiac Keychain £8.12.6

9ct. Gold Note Clip £11.2.6

Write for illustrated list of Christmas gifts.

ASPREY & CO. LTD. 165-169, NEW BOND ST., LONDON, W.1

From 21/- (plus tax) Every friend and relative on your list will be happy to receive a Swan pen or a Fyne-Poynt pencil. In a wide choice of colours and styles, including the new "Ladies' Presentation Set" shown above.

Swan Pens

MABIE, TODD & CO. LTD. Swan House, Whitby Avenue, Park Royal, London, N.W.10. 3 Exchange Street, Manchester, 2.

all over the world where good taste and pleasure meet

Dry Monopole
CHAMPAGNE

Sole representatives: Tetts & Brownings & Mollins Ltd., 5, Laurence Pountney Hill, E.C.4

Fresh Fruit Season
all the Year Round... KIA-ORA

ORANGE • LEMON • GRAPE FRUIT • LIME • LEMON BARLEY and washproof — No give-away fading or running of the colours . . . these beautiful furnishing fabrics look as lovely

SANDERSON as the day you bought them — year in and year out.

INDECOLOR FABRICS

— and have you seen the new ideas in

SANDERSON WALLPAPERS?

- ★ NO WATCHING
- ★ NO WAITING
- ★ NO SUPERVISION

FALKS Robot Toaster

AUTOMATICALLY YOURS

AUTOMATICALLY
... PERFECT

In goes the bread—out pops the toast, crisp, evenly coloured, served automatically at your table. The exclusive clock movement of this very special electric toaster ensures perfect toast . . . light, medium or dark whichever your choice . . . from first slice to last slice. No burnt toast, no frayed tempers but years of faithful service—reliable as a clock.

Price £5 18. 0.

Ask for a demonstration

Obtainable from usual electrical suppliers.
Write for name of nearest retailer to the makers.

FALKS, U DEPT., 91 FARRINGTON ROAD, LONDON, E.C.1

A Glass of Sherry ?

Buy Royal Decree

A Rich Royal Sherry—Amontillado or Butty Brandy—at twenty shillings a bottle from your Wine Merchant

Jarvis, Halliday & Co. Ltd.,

Jarvis

62 Pall Mall, London, S.W.1

Give her a Hoover

she knows it's the best

HOW thrilled, how excited she'll be—to have a magnificent new Hoover Cleaner with all the latest features, saving her hours of hard work every week. And think of the satisfaction you will have in knowing you are giving her the best. Remember, the Hoover does so much more than ordinary vacuum cleaners—it not only keeps carpets cleaner, but by removing the damaging trodden-in, gritty dirt makes them last longer.

There is a complete range of Hoover Cleaners—each a magnificent engineering job and beautifully finished to the last detail. Prices, with cleaning tools for curtains, upholstery, etc. :—from 12 gns. (plus purchase tax £3.3.0) to 22 gns. (plus tax £5.15.6). Hire Purchase available. See your Hoover Dealer and order now.

The HOOVER
REGD. TRADE MARK CLEANER

It BEATS... as it Sweeps... as it Cleans

HOOVER LIMITED · PERIVALE · GREENFORD · MIDDLESEX

AGA

Regd. Trade Mark

SAVES

IN THE DAYS BEFORE BANKS, country folk often buried their money under the hearthstone, and then lit over it the log fire which was never allowed to go out. Thrifty couples in these days keep up this old rural custom by putting their savings into an Aga cooker, which also stays in night and day. Here are some of the ways in which the Aga gives solid and appreciable savings:

On Cash:

So economical is the Aga in fuel consumption that savings in fuel bills eventually cover its initial cost. Look at it this way: the Aga Model CB has a guaranteed maximum fuel consumption of $3\frac{1}{4}$ tons a year. With coke at £5 a ton this means your quarter's fuel bill is less than £4.7.6 — i.e., for less than a shilling a day you have constant hot water and a perfect cooking service. Compare this figure with your current fuel budget. The difference will give you your monthly saving. And the answer will set you thinking seriously.

On Work:

How much work the Aga saves! No fire lighting, no black-leading, no constant stoking or refuelling, no greasy fumes, no soot or smoke. The Aga is as good as a servant in the kitchen.

On Capital:

Since 1929 tens of thousands of far-sighted couples have installed the Aga as an investment. They have got their money back long since and their fuel savings are now tax free income.

On Income:

The Aga CB is the only cooker and water heater which can be bought on Hire Purchase over a period of as long as five years (and is the only cooker and water heater on the market which is guaranteed for ten years). For as little as £2 a month (say 10/- a week or 1/6 a day) you can enjoy the most efficient cooker and an absolutely certain, trouble-free supply of hot water.

Send today for full details of all Aga models, address your letter to:—

AGA HEAT LTD.,
20 North Audley Street, London, W.1
(PROPRIETORS: ALLIED IRONFOUNDERS LTD.)

The Aristocrat of Radio and Television

In gracious homes, among those who demand the finest in radio and gramophone entertainment, you will find the R.G.D. Model 1046G.3 Radiogramophone. This superb instrument is fitted for long-playing and standard records; your local R.G.D. retailer will be pleased to arrange a demonstration.

RADIO GRAMPHONE DEVELOPMENT COMPANY LIMITED
BRIDGNORTH · SHROPSHIRE

Give the best you can obtain...

Give SPICER WRITING PAPERS

Spicer Ltd., London, S.E.1. Makers of fine papers since 1645.

fly BEA to Switzerland

Every day BEA Viking airliners leave London for Zurich and Geneva. Return fares: to Zurich £30.9.0, to Geneva £38.9.0. Special 23-day excursion fares: to Zurich £25, to Geneva £23.10.0. Flying BEA you can be eating dinner in Davos on the same day as you breakfasted in London: Book today at your Travel Agency, at your local BEA office, or at BEA, Dorland Hall, 14/20 Regent St., London, S.W.1. Tel: GERrard 9833.

BRITISH EUROPEAN AIRWAYS

"The first place for fitness is in the feet"

Herbert Barker

SIR HERBERT BARKER has been acknowledged the greatest expert in manipulative surgery in any age. Early in his career he satisfied himself that most cases of foot deformation were caused by ill-fitting shoes. That is why he designed these shoes for himself, and was afterwards persuaded by the Norvic Shoe Company to make them available for everybody.

Every shoe carries Sir Herbert's facsimile signature.

Sir Herbert Barker Shoes are obtainable from appointed Agents. Write to Department 27, Norvic Shoe Co. Ltd., Northampton, for the name of your nearest supplier.

Sir Herbert Barker Shoes

FOR MEN AND WOMEN — MAKE LIFE'S WORK EASIER

NORVIC SHOE COMPANY LIMITED, NORTHAMPTON

What's quickest and surest in an emergency?

HENNESSY. of course.
the Brandy that made Cognac famous

Hennessy Brandy is the heart of the grape.

It is distilled and matured in the heart of the famous Cognac vineyards. The happy blending of sunshine, soil, time and care has produced a brandy which is enjoyed in every country of the world. As a liqueur, as a beverage, as a safe and quick stimulant,

Hennessy Brandy is unequalled.

Is there a Hennessy in the House?

No wonder they are England's most wanted 'things for men' - the intimate useful gifts he'll accept with open arms - and an open heart too!
Choose any of the brightest Christmas
packs from 4/9 to 45/-

Cheviot

2-3 GOLDEN SQUARE LONDON W.1

SOUTH HATCH
Epsom,
Surrey

COPE'S STABLE INFORMATION

No. 7 of a series describing famous racing establishments

SEMO - Imperial Cup winner in 1927.

BLANKMERE - Ascot
Gold Cup, 1932.

SITUATED on the edge of Epsom Downs - almost under the shadow of the Grand Stand - South Hatch is the most famous of the Epsom training establishments.

Presided over by Walter Nightingall, who succeeded his father there in 1927, the establishment has accommodation for some sixty horses.

The total of famous winners sent out from South Hatch, both on the flat and over the sticks, runs into hundreds. Perhaps the most popular were Zeno, Silverstead, Jugo, Hock Star, Arctic Star, Silvermere, Ambition, the war-time Derby winner - Straight Deal - and the mare Fambidian.

From the most famous stables at Epsom to the most famous name in Turf accountancy, Cope's Confidential Credit Service has, in 55 years, built up a tremendous following of really satisfied clients. They prefer Cope's for courtesy and personal attention. They know that with Cope's they're "on" to integrity, dependability and fair dealing. They know - but why not find out for yourself? Send TO-DAY for your free copy of our fascinating new illustrated brochure.

You can depend on COPE'S

DAVID COPE LUDGATE CIRCUS
LONDON E.C.4
The World's Best Known Turf Accountants

CIGARS FOR CHRISTMAS—

but which cigars?..

For Christmas—if only for just this once—the best cigars! And so—as any man who knows today's cigars will tell you—you'll be wise to confine your choice to finest Jamaica.

And remember this: the occasional cigar smoker usually prefers a mild cigar. La Tropical—as full of character as any that Jamaica sends us—is notably, nevertheless, a mild cigar. When you're buying cigars as a gift, you'll be wise to ask for La Tropical.

In cedar boxes of 10, 25 and 50. In cartons of 5.
In all the usual sizes from 2.5d. upwards; Petitas 116d.

LA TROPICAL

DELUXE

Finest Jamaica Cigars

Sole Importers:
Lambert and Butler, Branch of The Imperial Tobacco Co. (of Great Britain and Ireland), Ltd.

L. 720

*Better drink
for Christmas*

MARTINI
SWEET VERMOUTH OR DRY

Christmas Presents!

The flies are held by Magnetic Force and while easy to get at, cannot blow or fall out. For Medium Salmon Flies and trout wet and dry flies.

PRICE 36/9
incl. P. Tax

Just one of the excellent suggestions to be found in Milwards' CHRISTMAS LIST, which will be sent to you, with our catalogue if required, on request to our Redditch Works or to our shop at

7-8, BURY ST., ST. JAMES'S, LONDON, S.W.1

Milwards
FISHING TACKLE
... a name to angle with !
REDDITCH ENGLAND

TWO MARVELS
AUTOMATIC AND PRECISION PERFORMANCE

CYMA
Automatic
WITH SAFETY DEVICE PREVENTING OVERWINDING

BORN 1820—

still going strong

Johnnie Walker
Fine old Scotch Whisky

POPULAR 3/-
STANDARD & SPORTS 3/11
SPECIAL 5/6

and TOOTAL
Guaranteed!

TOOTAL TIES ARE WASHABLE AND MARKED
TEBILIZED FOR TESTED CREASE-RESISTANCE
TEBILIZED is a Registered Trade Mark
Tootal Broadhurst Lee Co. Ltd., 56 Oxford Street, Manchester 1

ESCAPE TO THE PAST

A drink of priceless pearls

ONCE, long ago, the River Nile was host to an historic banquet. The food and drink were exotic beyond measure. The feats of strength and daring were magnificent beyond imagination. For had not Antony to impress the haughty Cleopatra?

She scorned his feeble efforts. She could do far better.

Antony laughed. Cleopatra bridled, saying that for supper she would consume food and drink costing sixty million aesterces—one-and-one-half million pounds. Confident, he challenged her boast with a great wager.

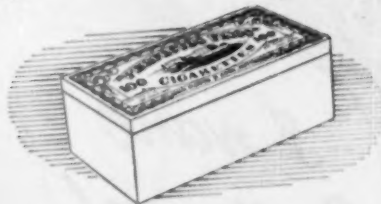

Later, when they had eaten, Cleopatra took a cruet of sharp vinegar. From her ear she plucked a pearl—the richest pearl the world had ever known—and dropped it in the vinegar. It dissolved. And, in consummation of this simple supper, she drank it off. Before she could reach for the second priceless pearl, she was judged the winner.

Antony, who had come for Egypt's navy and remained for Egypt's queen, sailed without either.

Today, little remains of that age of fabulous fare. We can still thrill to a view of Grand Canyon or the buoyant strains of Scheherazade. But what further have we?

A hint of luxury survives in Perfectos Cigarettes. Made by Player's according to the finest traditions of that world-famous House, blended by the world's finest craftsmen, they are packed in boxes of 50 and 100. In an imperfect world Perfectos Cigarettes are just about perfect.

"PERFECTOS FINOS"

CIGARETTES

ISSUED BY The Imperial Tobacco Co. (of Great Britain and Ireland), Ltd.

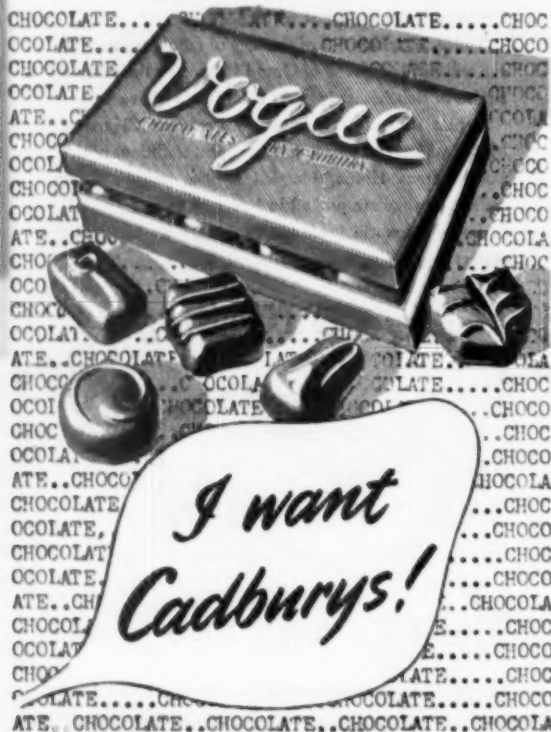

WHEN MEN WERE MEN AND WOMEN WERE WOMEN

THERE WERE GIANTS in those days, as the old saying goes. People in older times mostly had a vigour, a gusto, a pleasure in living that is often killed by the bustle and strain of modern life. 'Sanatogen' gives you back that gusto, that pleasure. 'Sanatogen' creates new reserves which will recapture for you that vitality and excitement of an heroic age. It supplies essential phosphorus and protein to build up both nerves and body, in a form the system can easily assimilate.

SANATOGEN THE NERVE TONIC

*Santogen® (Regd. Trade Mark) is obtainable at all chemists from S/Gd, inc tan.

Nation-Wide Distribution

This is the Housemark of Whitbread, whose beers have been famous for over 200 years.

These beers are brewed from the finest barley and hops, bottled solely by Whitbread, and distributed from their 33 depots placed in key centres throughout the country.

The combination of nation wide distribution and close supervision ensures that your Whitbread reaches you in perfect condition, wherever you may be. Try some to-day.

PERFECT BREWING

PERFECT BOTTLING

by WHITBREAD

Digestive Sweet Meal Biscuits by

McVITIE
& PRICE

Makers of Finest Quality Biscuits

FAMOUS FOR OVER 50 YEARS

McVITTIE & PRICE LTD. EDINBURGH · LONDON · MANCHESTER

PUNCH

OR
The London Charivari

CHARIVARIA

MR. MORRISON complains that Fleet Street is taking too long to set its affairs in order. The Government are clearly anxious that the newspapers should turn over a new leaf while there is still one left for them to turn over.

Members of a local Traffic Advisory Committee have complained that the holding of first-aid lectures for the staff in waiting-rooms at stations is causing inconvenience to passengers. They say that while waiting for trains they have had to cool their heels on the platform instead of in front of the waiting-room fire.

"It is fatally easy to lose one's bearings just now in Korea," cables a representative. But it is not true that the Daily Worker correspondent was recently found wandering in the British lines.

Pessimist

"Good news for brides. You can now buy a full set of first rate cutlery for one person only."

Daily paper

Hollywood, we read, is still actively on the watch against suspected Communists. So far, however, none of its inhabitants has offered any objection to being screened.

City folk, says a sailor, don't realize how dangerous fogs are for shipping going in and out of our ports. Cargoes of coal may actually be in danger of colliding head-on.

"Kill two birds with one stone and cook enough sausages to have them hot one day and cold the next, with salad. The sausages can be slipped into the oven and baked along with some halved tomatoes." West Herts and Watford Observer

And the birds?

A Present for Christmas

A simple solution of the Christmas present problem is to give your friends an annual subscription to PUNCH.

This has the double advantage, denied to most gifts, of being wrapped up by somebody else and of repeating itself every week of the year.

Subscriptions can be arranged either through your local newsagent, or by posting the names and addresses of your friends direct to PUNCH, 10 Boulevard Street, London, E.C.4, together with remittance (30/- Home; 34/- or $5.50 Canada; $5.25 U.S.A.; 36/6 elsewhere abroad). The subscription covers fifty-two weekly issues, the Summer Number and Almanack and (for 1951) a special "Festival of Punch" number.

MORE SCINDE AGAINST THAN SINNING

THE above title, otherwise contemptible, may serve to remind readers of a correspondence that has been raging recently, and relentlessly, in the Daily Telegraph. Starting from the sure foundation of a leader on the value of Latin, the correspondence took its natural, one might almost say hallowed, course, via the brevity and conscientiousness of that tongue, through "veni, vidi, vici" to the triumphant emergence of "Peccavi"—"I have Scinde." Sir Patrick Cadell, in the course of a brisk discussion on the origin of the famous dispatch, struck a shrewd blow for truth by attributing it to Punch of 1844.

If this paper has been a little slow in intervening in the debate the blame must rest squarely on the shoulders of Alderman Gibbs. Some might say that the Mean Mayor, the Ojibbeway Indians and the curious case of the Clock of St. Clement's have together wasted not less time than the Alderman and should bear their share of any odium that may be going. The objection is certainly not without weight. But Gibbs began it.

It must not be supposed, of course, that any doubt existed in the offices in Bouverie Street but that so good a joke as "Peccavi—I have Scinde" originated in the pages of Punch. If a difficulty arose it was simply that of actually laying a finger on the item in question; and that sort of difficulty can only be overcome by opening the volume for 1844 at page one and eagerly scanning it, issue by issue, page by page and column by column, for the word "peccavi" (which comes from the verb peccare—perhaps the only infinitive in Latin that resembles, at first sight, a small gregarious pig). This was done.

Alderman Gibbs makes a veiled appearance on the second page of the first issue. "The antiquarians of St. Stephen's, Walbrook," says an item headed "Novel Discovery," "were much puzzled the other day by the discovery of a very curious looking document, which an old parish clerk recognised as 'A Churchwarden's Accounts.' However, there was something written on it, which, for a long time, could not be made out; at last one old gentleman, having somewhat better eyes than the rest, discovered it to be the word 'audited!'"

This is the sort of item, weird, inexplicable, not immediately side-splitting but with just a hint of scandal about it, that is best calculated to delay a man looking for the word "peccavi." It makes it impossible to pass over a contribution, eight pages later, headed "PUNCH'S PANTOMIME—Harlequin Churchwarden, or The Wizard of Walbrook," which opens with the entry of the Churchwarden into the nave of St. Stephen's reciting:

For twice ten weeks—and ten to that again,
They've asked for my accounts—and asked in vain.
For oh! how dare the varlets to expect
A sight intended but for eyes select!

Enter a GENIUS

The pantomime concludes with the performance of some tricks by the Churchwarden, as Pantaloon, among which is "an extraordinary contrivance by which an immense pair of scales, with a balance labelled 'Balance on an immense Scale,' appear to pass naturally into Pantaloon's pocket."

The impression begins to creep in that some sort of peculation, or misappropriation of public funds, is being hinted at; but four more pages must be turned before the shrewd anonymity in which the chief character has hitherto been cloaked is rudely torn aside by the appearance of ALDERMAN GIBBS in his own right (eight times, each time in large capitals) and followed by a total of no less than twenty-one exclamation marks.

To the searcher, whose eye has already been caught by five references to the Clock of St. Clement's and two to the Ojibbeway Indians, interruptions of this kind are an almost intolerable hindrance. Nor is there the slightest sign of any amelioration. On the contrary, in the course of the next seventeen pages the clock (which appears to have been out of order at this time) obtrudes itself three times, the inscrutable Ojibbeway Indians (of whom one soon tires) twice more and Gibbs himself on six several occasions. There is not a sign of Scinde.

Sometimes—a diabolical delaying tactic—two of the three pests are combined in a single paragraph:

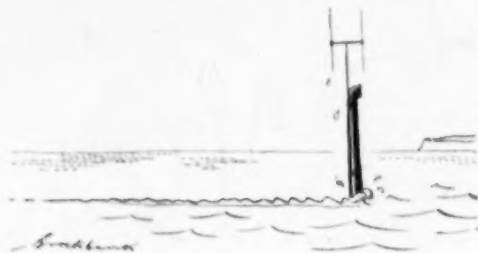

"The public may not be aware that Alderman Gibbs' accounts were published on the same day that the clock of St. Clement's Church was set going. . . ."

Perhaps not. Still, if Alderman Gibbs' accounts have been published and the clock of St. Clement's set going, there is an end of it. Victory for Punch on both counts. Only the Indians menace us now.

One underestimates the tenacity of our forefathers. Punch thought little of the accuracy of the accounts and continued to chase the Alderman unmercifully, and as for the clock—what is this that meets the dimming eye?

"We have received several complaints on the subject of the Clock of St. Clement's, which has caused the greatest inconvenience since it has been put right, by the confusion it occasions to those who, having been accustomed to see it always wrong, are now more than ever misled by it."

The infernal thing went wrong again in February. However, determination overcomes every obstacle in time. Constantly held up by Gibbs, fooled by an article beginning "Lord Ellenborough's despatches"

VISITATION

[Large blocks of ice have unaccountably fallen on this country in recent weeks.]

"Lor' bless you, no! That's LAST year's harvest."

on March 16, diverted by some stinging sallies at the expense of the Emperor of Russia, disheartened by the sudden reappearance, after a long absence, of the Ojibbeway Indians in April, and led astray by a new butt in the person of the Mean Mayor (who seems to have fallen short in the matter of giving dinners), we yet come at last to page 209, in the May 18 issue. And there it is:

Foreign Affairs.

It is a common idea that the most laconic military despatch ever issued was that sent by CÆSAR to the Horse-Guards at Rome, containing the three memorable words "Veni, vidi, vici," and, perhaps, until our own day, no like instance of brevity has been found. The despatch of SIR CHARLES NAPIER, after the capture of Scinde, to LORD ELLENBOROUGH, both for brevity and truth, is, however, far beyond it. The despatch consisted of one emphatic word—"Pecavi," "I have Scinde," (sinced).

It was well over a year since the event, but jokes as subtle as that take time. Punch did not approve of the East India Company's habit of annexation, so that "Pecavi" has a sharp point, and the joke, though late, was topical in that Lord Ellenborough (known as "the tame elephant" and cartooned as such in the same issue) had just been recalled from his post as Governor-General.

We can now, and not before time, close the volume for 1844—only re-opening it to remark that the issue for November 9 is almost entirely devoted to the inauguration of the new Lord Mayor. The fact that the Mean Mayor was going out was enough to make this something of an occasion for Punch, but the paper had a passing interest also in the new man—Gibbs.

The "follow-up" couplet, to which the attention of readers of the Telegraph has already been drawn, was published on March 22, 1856, and ran as follows:

TRUMPING THE ELEPHANT.

"Pecavi—I've Scinde," wrote LORD ELLEN so proud.
More briefly DALHOUSIE wrote—"Fori—I've Oude."

It seems to show a peculiar ignorance of the fact that its predecessor had appeared in Punch and, what is more, that the "despatch" had then been fathered on Napier. (Searchers in those days were possibly more easily diverted from their objective.) The restraints of verse, rather perhaps than any heightened confidence in the quickness of the reader, dissuaded the Editor in this instance from adding an explanatory (I roined) at the end.

"Fori," in any case, lacked the sting of "pecavi," and it may have been some consciousness of this that led to the appearance in the next issue of an outspoken attack on the morality of the annexation. The title of this latter piece, "Oude Have Thought It," indicates that the pronunciation of this part of India was not less uncertain in the eighteen-fifties than it is to-day.

H. F. ELLIS

A MATTER OF NOMENCLATURE

IT isn't often, I suppose, that one sees anything really funny in the left-hand column of the front page of The Times. The coy announcement of a sister (Penelope) for Anthony and Elizabeth, and the brief records of engagements contracted and broken may bring a smile to the face of the cynic. But in the fifty-one-thousand-odd left-hand columns that have appeared up to the time of writing, genuine belly-laughs must have been few.

The last recorded instance happened to my wife at breakfast this morning. I looked at her inquiringly.

"It's Dorothy Bramridge," she said, still grinning.

"Dorothy Brambridge?"

"Bramridge."

"Bambridge."

"No. Bramridge."

"That's what I said," I replied, taking a piece of toast. "What about her?"

It seemed that Miss Bramridge didn't like her surname. Nobody ever pronounced or spelt it right the first time. The other members of her family apparently took a philosophical view of being known by a variety of aliases. They knew that when they met some official who had to write their name on a form they must spell it slowly letter by letter, and that even then it was an odds-on chance they would pick up an extra B or lose an R. They used rubber stamps embossed with the twenty-seven commoner variants of Bramridge when they endorsed cheques. They accepted that it was utterly useless to say who they were to strangers on the telephone. At the theatre they would not themselves be amused by the stock situation of farce in which the irascible father refers to his daughter's young man indiscriminately as Philbrick, Pilditch, Fildyke, Maybrick and so forth, but they would recognize that for the Joneses and Robinsons in the audience the dialogue might possibly contain the elements of comedy.

Not so Dorothy. From her early schooldays she writhed at any distortion of her name. She was apt to be ill-tempered with shop assistants and people at the Food Office, and curt with new acquaintances who weren't concentrating when they were introduced. Moreover, she had to grapple with additional complications; the question "What name, miss?" drawing from her first a sigh, and then a despairing "Bwamwidge."

Mrs. Bramridge has always thought her unreasonable. "After all, Dorothy," she has been telling her for years, "I was forced to take the name when I married your father. I've got it for life. But what are you worrying about? You're bound to change it one day, and then you won't have any more of this trouble."

"That day," concluded my wife, "has now arrived." She passed me The Times, indicating with her finger where to read.

I wiped off the inevitable blob of marmalade and saw: "On November 15th, quietly, Dorothy, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bramridge of Exonbury, to Colonel Wladislaw Skrzypczowski, formerly of the Polish Army."

ENTRE NOUS

IN modern prose some tend to praise

Extensive use of foreign phrase,
But when this habit spreads to verse
The trend declines de mal en pis.
Our English tongue has many charms,

So why receive, à bras ouverts,
A poem which, though it may rhyme,

Is couched in French de temps en temps!

Perhaps such verses are designed
By those who are non compos mentis,

And if we find that this is true
We ought to write their lines de novo,
Inserting, where each phrase occurred,

The English equal, verbatim.

We'll gain, in saving Art from cranks,

The reading public's muchas gracias.
However, it's a minor fault—

Let's take it cum grano salis.

NO DOVES

THE SEVERN WILDFOWL TRUST

WE had not been five minutes in the grounds of the Severn Wildfowl Trust before we encountered a rara avis. We knew about rara avis, we had even known for nearly two days that they came out of Juvenal; we also knew that a bird in the hand was worth two in the bush, that birds in their little nests agreed, and that you could in favourable circumstances kill two with one stone. We were confident of our ability to distinguish a sparrow from a peacock. If you had asked us to name ten different species of wildfowl we should have referred you to Mr. Peter Scott.

This rara avis was a ne-ne, or Hawaiian goose, of which only twenty-four are known to exist—twenty-two at home in Hawaii and the other two in the Severn Wildfowl Trust's collection at Slimbridge in Gloucestershire. One might well think it strange to find a Hawaiian goose in Gloucestershire, but the goose seemed to see nothing odd about it. It hurried forward with glad cries and took some food from the outstretched hand of the Trust's Director. About the Director's feet a polychromatic assortment of Cape Teal, Bahama Pintails, Mandarins, Philippine Duck and other avian charmers clamoured for largesse. They were obviously showing off, we thought; for the Director is Mr. Peter Scott himself, and perhaps if they were very good he might put them into a picture.

"Come on, beautiful," Mr. Scott called winningly, carrying his bucket of tit-bits farther into the Rushy Pen; and they came as obediently as if they had been domestic hens instead of whistling Tree-duck from Australia, Coscoroba Swans from South America, Barrow's Golden-eyes with rich blue-black heads, Carolina duck as gaily uniformed as Papal Guards, Mergansers with crests like untidy little boys, grey-and-black-freckled Emperor Geese, Red-breasted Geese from Siberia (worth a hundred pounds a pair—the Christmas turkey's nearest rival) . . .

"We've got every known variety of swan but one," said Mr. Scott, "and all but two varieties of geese. Altogether in the collection there are a hundred and twenty-two different varieties."

"And do you find," we asked, delighted to have spotted the opening, "that birds of, as it were, a feather tend to sort of flock together?"

Before we knew it we were discussing the origin of species.

When the light went we joined Mr. Scott for tea in his studio-laboratory-sitting-room, and he told us about his organization.

The Severn Wildfowl Trust is not a kind of zoo. The tame birds make a fine show, and the wild birds on the decoy and the Dumbles (the saltings where the geese feed) are immensely exciting to watch; but that, except in so far as it helps to bring in revenue from visitors, is incidental. The Trust exists for the serious scientific study of wildfowl. What, for instance, is the motive in "preening"? How strong is a duck's sense of smell? Can birds see red light? Why should an adult Blue Snow-gander develop a "crush" on a kennel-type nesting-box when Blue Snow-geese are readily available? What causes tameness and wildness in birds?

Much work on migration is done by ringing. Duck are caught on the decoy pool by luring them up narrow "pipes" of water with a dog. Wild duck will always try to mob a dog; the dog leads them well into the pipe, which is covered by netting, and a man then shows at the pool end and drives the duck into the narrow funnel at the other end, where they are caught and ringed. The ring bears a number and a request to inform the Natural History Museum where the bird has been found. About ten per cent of ringed birds are recovered.

Ringed geese is done by means of jet-propelled nets. The nets, with rockets attached to the corners, are spread where the geese are known to feed; when the geese have obligingly pitched there the rockets are electrically fired and the net descends on them out of the blue. The tension while you wait for the geese to come within rocket-range, said Mr. Scott, is terrific; the whole operation is even more wildly exciting than trapping duck in a decoy, and that is wildly exciting. The ensnared geese are ringed and their posteriors dipped into bright-coloured dye to assist in future recognition; then they are released—and, like ducks (who commonly fly straight back to the decoy pool), appear to be none the worse for their experience.

We would willingly have listened to Mr. Scott on the subject all night, but we thought it hardly fair.

At half-past eight next morning, however, we returned, be-muffled, be-duffled and be-gumbooted, and Mr. Scott led us out for the high spot of the expedition—our visit to the feeding geese on the Dumbles. It was nice weather for ducks, i.e., it had been raining heavily and there was much standing water which the ducks, in fact, disliked if anything more than we; still, plodding doggedly behind Mr. Scott, moving quietly, speaking low, keeping down when necessary—for the wild goose is easily upset—we came to the hide on the sea-wall. With infinite caution we peered forth—and there they were, about five hundred of them, rather far out, alas! but near enough to see beautifully through binoculars. They were, Mr. Scott said, chiefly white-fronted geese, though there were a few pink-feet and the usual "miscellaneous"—four cormorants, a heron, some curlew, and a couple of crows. There were no doves of course; they were all at Warsaw.

These geese are, in a way, responsible for the Trust being there at all. White-fronts breed in Siberia and winter in England. Lesser white-fronts breed in Scandinavia, winter in Hungary, and in England are, in Mr. Scott's phrase, "as rare a bird as you are ever likely to see." Mr. Scott had a theory, however, that if the two migrating columns should ever meet, a few clueless specimens of each variety might take up with the wrong set and winter in the wrong country.

Now the geese have been feeding on the Dumbles for centuries, having been carefully tended by the Berkeley family, who own the land; but lesser white-fronts have not been regarded as "among those present." Then along came Mr. Scott in pursuit of his theory, and found a lesser white-front first go off. Since then they have been reported in this country a further eleven times, mostly in the same place.

With so interesting a phenomenon taking place within half a mile of a perfectly good duck decoy the Severn Wildfowl Trust was almost inevitable.

However, revenons à nos oies.

We asked Mr. Scott hopefully if there was a lesser white-front here to-day; but if there was, he was keeping out of sight. They fed quietly and unsuspectingly while we swept them with our field-glasses; and then came a sad but all too common interruption. An aeroplane buzzed across the Dumbles, and immediately the geese took flight, circling uneasily over the water long after the intrusive machine was out of sight.

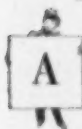

But what is this? One of those fighting geese flaps faster than the rest; he is smaller in size; he is—is he?—well, it will need confirmation. But he might have been the thirteenth lesser white-fronted goose to be recorded in this country. We left the hide with a sense of triumph, as if we had enticed him to Gloucestershire ourselves.

B. A. YOUNG

AT THE PICTURES

The Clouded Yellow
To Please a Lady

AS far as the structure of the story is concerned, The Clouded Yellow (Director: RALPH THOMAS) looks to be a pretty insouciant job: the piece falls into two parts, the surprise-ending for one part being stuck quite arbitrarily on to the other so as to round off the film. But it comes over very well as an unpretentious thriller, lively and fresh in detail, well played and directed, amusing, and attractive to the eye. JEAN SIMMONS is again the persecuted innocent, and the weakest stretch of the picture is the first, which is devoted to establishing her in this situation in one of those artificially sinister country houses. Here the old clichés turn up—the insolent handyman irresistible to women, the piano-playing (for a horrible moment I feared another concerto), the spectacularly subtle attempts to make the innocent doubt her sanity, and so on. Later the piece becomes a pursuit story and moves north, and the authentic, well-photographed detail of life and scene in and around the docks of Newcastle and Liverpool and among the hills of the Lake District immeasurably brightens the chase. Another thing that brightens this chase is that it is supposed to be something of a duel between experts, for the innocent has the help of a sacked Secret Service man (TREVOR HOWARD) in a position to use his former professional contacts—not to mention such useful professional devices as feigning broken ribs and then knocking out the ambulance-man. Throughout, too, there is a valuable brightness about the fragmentary decorative incident or character: one remembers with pleasure such moments as the interview with the mild, deprecating, helpful appointments officer (RICHARD WATTIS) who gets the hero his job of cataloguing butterflies and so gives the picture some vague excuse for being called after one of them. (Even so, I didn't notice any real connection.)

Age of Speed

In contrast to this, To Please a Lady (Director: CLARENCE BROWN) is a very elaborately planned piece of work, thoroughly calculated in every department from the first construction of the theme onwards. Construction of the theme, I repeat: this was no bright idea, but a careful fitting-together of proved box-office ingredients. Spectacular motor-racing, technical talk and "thrill circus" scenes for the men; for the women, the "career-woman" angle—a brilliant, smart, beautiful, self-confident woman columnist with a sumptuously-furnished office, a palatial home, forty million readers, and strong men leaping to carry out her every order. Nobody short of the stern, savage and mature CLARK GABLE could be expected to handle so independent and power-drunk a beauty. He appears as a racing-driver as ruthless on the track as she is in print and on the air; as soon as she begins to persecute him in her column because of his ruthlessness the end is never in doubt (not that it ever could be in this sort of film, but you know what I mean). She falls into his arms at the end because he has acted out of character for once by failing to be ruthless. All this is quite without significance or anything more than momentary value; but momentary value—mere entertainment, in fact—has its points.

Survey

(Dates in brackets refer to Punch reviews)

From the other London shows I would still pick The Men (29/11/50), La Beauté du Diable (15/11/50), Occupe-Toi d'Andrieu (22/11/50), and that good thriller Crisis.

Best release, a very good one indeed, is The Asphalt Jungle (Director: JOHN HUSTON), which missed being reviewed at length during the printing dispute (drawings in "Cinema Sketchbook" 25/10/50): an excellent film about crime, well written, well acted, well photographed, well directed, memorable and worth seeing more than once. Another good one is a Cavalry-c.-Indians Western, Two Flugs West (15/11/50).

RICHARD MALLETT

IS SCIENCE BANKRUPT?

A short précis of a Paper read by the author to the Biological Circle of Soping-on-Sea

ONCE again I find myself at loggerheads with Modern Thought. I have just read a statement that the scale of atomic attack necessary to destroy the whole surface of the globe is much larger than people realize.

"Even if America and Russia," says the scientist who was interviewed, "were to devote their resources to this one end it would take about twenty thousand years."

This seems to me a counsel of despair. I cannot for a moment believe that the job would take so long. Does our scientist realize the effect of hearty good-will and co-operation in an undertaking of this sort? Of careful planning and a single overall control?

It is not of course a task to be undertaken lightly. A great deal of care would have to be exercised to prevent overlapping, and it may well be that the assistance of the air forces of Great Britain and even more backward countries would have to be called to our aid.

But there is a brighter side to the picture. A great part of the surface of the globe (and this our scientist seems to have forgotten) is already in such a chaotic, tangled, ruinous, and altogether uninhabitable condition that it would be utterly unnecessary to destroy it at all. Bits of brick and stone, piles of rubbish and old metal lie about everywhere. It is impossible for me to get my own boiler-pipe mended. And what of the vast swamps inhabited only by the crocodile; the hippopotamus, the bull-frog, the quag-beetle and the water-leech?

What of the virgin forests of the Amazon, where the howl of the jaguar is only answered by the long bellow of the manatee? What of the thousand upon thousand acres of ice, where the penguin, the aurora borealis and the white bear reign supreme, and the harpoon of even the most intrepid of trappers is seldom or never heard? What of the gulches and canyons and huge crumbling masses of amygdaloid basalt and porphyritic gneiss, not one of which is worth the bother of bashing to pieces? What of the tracts of pathless sand without traces of human habitation, where the ruin of some ancient city has been accomplished already by a score of centuries even more neatly than it could be done by the most powerful explosives of to-day?

To tackle all this would be a waste of our labour and entirely outside the compass of the scheme under review.

Then, again, there is the sea. No responsible air force acting under a single unified command would attempt to demolish the sea, the waters of which cover about one hundred and thirty-million square miles, or five-sevenths of the surface of the globe, so far as I have been able to verify the calculations of earlier geodesists. To muck about with all this water would be merely to make laughing-stocks of ourselves, and might even have the effect of causing new islands to spring up in unexpected places; so that the whole work would have to be undertaken again and again. Even if the sea boiled it would simply facilitate the labour of domestic cookery and bring us no nearer to our end.

Obviously we should concentrate on the built-up areas and the arable land, which are of a quite limited extent, and which alone would repay the cost of our enterprise. The one trouble that I foresee (though I cannot say how far it affected our scientist's calculations) would occur in the final stages of the operation. Suppose, for instance, that the bombing squadrons of Utica or of Omsk had carefully obliterated all the local targets allotted to them, they would still have to leave until the very end their own air-strips and their own stock-piles of atom bombs; and these would have to be annihilated with the last load. Orders would have to be given to every air fleet to avoid as far as possible munition dumps and landing grounds.

Otherwise the whole thing would be a fiasco. Nevertheless, to suppose that all the resources of our civilization would have to waste twenty thousand years on an affair of this kind seems to me to be a ridiculous over-estimate; even if we take out the time for Sundays, Bank Holidays, sickness, furlough and foggy weather. If this is the measure of our human progress in aviation it would be far simpler for every municipal borough to commit the undertaking to its own bulldozers and road drills, or for every citizen to take up his pickaxe and mattock and do the job for himself.

My own estimate is about ninety-eight years, for a forty-two-hour week without overtime. EVOR

"She's been wearing the same old things for as long as I can remember."

NEVER LET THE FANCY ROOM

WHEN I went up to the lumber-room the other day, to find something for a jumble-sale, I knew very well that I should be there for some time. It has happened before. Sure enough, the ten minutes that would have seen a better man on his way downstairs with a telescope, a solitaire board and Uncle Tom's Cabin were just sufficient to find me comfortably seated on a pile of Dictionaries of National Biography, reading The Swiss Family Robinson.

I had first settled down to consider whether a pair of fishing waders, fifteen years old, twice re-footed and leaking like sieves, would be held to flout the Law of the Jumble. A really resourceful purchaser, I reflected, would have them as good as new in next to no time, by simply dipping them into a cauldron of boiling rubber. He would need some sand and a good deal of clay, I learned from The Swiss Family Robinson, which I found after a long search, wrapped up, for some incomprehensible reason, in an old table-tennis net. I was foolish to dip into it, of course. Most of us live rather sheltered lives nowadays, and for my part it has never come my way to rub the interior of a condor with pepper. My sun has long passed its meridian, and in the natural order of things I can now hardly expect that such an experience will be vouchsafed to me. The next best thing is to read about it, but I confess that I find it exceedingly difficult to leave the Robinson family sitting down to a couple of bear's paws, well soaked in brine, without ascertaining the outcome, if I may so put it. However, in half an hour or so I was back to the business in hand. Unfortunately, it is pretty well impossible to brood over a pair of waders for a moment without recalling the last occasion on which they were worn, particularly when that occasion has been marked by the loss of the only salmon one has ever hooked.

As I sat, living once more that memorable encounter, it occurred to me that few of my fishing experiences would, if thrown on to paper, read so prettily as most of the specimens of angling literature that have so far come my way. ("McCrumple was ready with the gaff, and without hesitation he lifted out a fine cock fish, bright as new silver, of some thirty pounds weight.") On this particular occasion, for instance, it cannot be denied that there were two highlights at any rate that would look pretty odd in print. These might be referred to as "The Keeper's Question" and "The Fall Among the Clergymen."

In most of my angling literature keepers, gillies and so on limit themselves to an occasional "Cannily, cannily, your Grace," or perhaps a "Haud up, General, or he'll be over the fa'!" One at least has been known to exclaim, rather censoriously, "He wouldna' go!" I was fishing alone (I would dearly like to add "on this occasion," but truth will out—I always do) and it was quite by chance that the keeper arrived, some ten minutes after I had hooked my salmon. The following dialogue ensued:

Myself. "I'm into a salmon!"
Keeper. "Did you get that bag at Higginson's?"

One would have thought that the man might have had the sense to exclaim "Guid sakes, mon, haud up!" or something of the kind, but there it is.

A little later, when I should, I suppose, have been coolly applying side-strain, or sliding rings of twist tobacco down my line, I found myself forcing my way backwards through some bushes as I retreated up the bank. My plan was to coax the fish towards the side, when the keeper might, I thought, flounder into the water and pull it out by the tail: silver or cupro-nickel, it mattered nothing to me, and anything over seven pounds would have been splendid. So great was my concentration that before I knew where I was I found myself in the middle of a party of clergymen who had been watching the struggle. Apologizing awkwardly (I had trodden on several toes, and my landing-net, the handle of which I was for some reason holding between my teeth at the time, had knocked off someone's hat), and keeping a tight line on my fish as best I could, I burst my way out of the group, only to trip and roll some way down the bank. "He's off!" I cried.

Now of course all this, except perhaps the last exclamation, would make a pitiful show in print. Did literary anglers, I wondered, never have such experiences? Lord Grey of course, in his fine book Fly Fishing, touched on something of the kind—"The salmon made a sudden recovery, and dashed down between my legs"—"In stretching down to get my net under the fish I fell flat in the water"—but such frankness is rare.

By the time I had finished with Fly Fishing—and perhaps I should make it quite clear that I did not find it in the lumber-room—it was growing dark. I switched on the light and looked about me once more. A few condensers, resistances and inductances wired clumsily to a dry battery, together with a pair of headphones, turned my thoughts to the war and to one of the blunders committed by the Government at the outset, hitherto unpublished—the attempt to make me into a wireless mechanic. At the time I was with the Government heart and soul. It seemed to me that although I had not been able to attain prominence in my chosen calling I might yet make my mark on the national life through the medium of wireless telegraphy. As in a dream I saw myself slapping Marconi on the back and correcting his wiring diagrams. "Where are your double-diode triodes, man?" I would chaff him. It was after I had completed the first part of my course that I bought these components. Like De Quincey, in his first experiment with opium, "what I took, I took under every disadvantage." Nevertheless, within an hour I was able to hear voices—faint, it is true, but unmistakable. Unfortunately, in this first great flash of brilliance it seemed that I had burned myself out. The next part of the course involved soldering. Where Marconi was no doubt upheld by a mystical faith in his destiny, however beadily his solder ran, I became discouraged. As Keats wilted beneath the attacks of his critics—not of course about soldering, as far as I know—so it was with me. I lost heart.

The wireless parts were resting on some piano music, and I had hardly turned over a selection from "Funny Face" before I found myself closeted with Sir Malcolm Sargent and Yehudi Menuhin. Sir Malcolm was weeping openly and Menuhin was shaking me by the hand, his face working. I had played something or other—the first part of the "Moonlight" sonata, I should imagine. "I want you with me in Holst's 'Planets,'" Sir Malcolm was saying brokenly.

I suppose I was in the lumber-room for about three hours, with nothing to show for it but a broken coal-scuttle. I shall be firmer another time.

T. S. WATT

CAPTIVE AUDIENCE

WHEN an official with INFORMATION embroidered on his hat has told you that your train left Grantham fifty-four minutes late you have small choice either in the site of your detestable vigil or the company you find there. You dive for the only empty seat in the refreshment room, and you find too late that your table is shared by a balding, beady-eyed monologist and a devoted stooge or straight man.

That, at any rate, was what happened to me. At first I didn't notice. I was thinking about the railway. Then I realized that a continuous low droning, which I had vaguely associated with tea-stewing machinery, was, in fact, the voice of the beady-eyed man.

"Weather!" he was saying. "Well, let's see. The Monday was wet; no was the Tuesday. Very, very wet, the Tuesday; rained all day. Wednesday, I said to the wife, I said, 'I think it's going to be a bit better.' You know how you do. 'It looks to me,' I said to her, 'as if it's going to clear,' I said."

"And did it!" said the other man.

It might have been said with a dozen different inflexions, boredom, heavy sarcasm, mock-fascination and frank rudeness among them. I know how I should have said it. But the interpretation of the present speaker, a heavy man with a well-starched collar and thick spectacles, so surprised me that I blew bubbles in my tea, a thing I had always supposed impossible except in stage farce. He put the question, you see, as if he hardly knew how to wait for the answer. He leaned forward, eyes shining, his cup arrested half-way to his lips, his head turned a fraction sideways as if he suspected that one ear was capable of a shade finer tuning than the other. From that moment the heavy man, though he could not have said a hundred words during the whole fifty-four minutes, had my full attention. He was that enigma of enigmas, the man who listens to a bore as if he loves it.

"So I put the brake on and stopped the car," the beady-eyed man was saying. "Put her in neutral, switched off, got out and closed the door and thought I'd have a look at this headlight, see?" The heavy man nodded with suppressed excitement several times. "Well, I gave it a bit of a knock first with my hand, like. Thought it might be a connection gone. Might be a broken wire. Sometimes when a light packs up like that, for no reason at all that you can see, it's just a loose connection. I remember coming down from Carlisle in September '47—no, October it would be, because they'd just put the clocks back . . . no, I'm a liar, it was '48, two years ago. Well, I had a headlight pack up then. Or was it a sidelight? So I put on the brake and stopped the car, put her in neutral—"

"Switched off . . .!" said the heavy man, nodding and hitching his chair an inch or two closer. I imagine that if the President of the Dickens Fellowship had found himself listening to the missing chapters of Edwin Drood his attitude would have been much the same.

The voice droned on. I began to wonder whether the enthralled listener was perhaps a model of spiritual beauty and compassion who saw it as his rôle in this vale of tears to go about bringing sweetness and light into the lives of the trite and tedious, but just as I was formulating a plan to recommend him for canonization—what more ripe for sainthood than this?—I happened to push my cup and saucer on to the corner of the beady man's evening paper, and saintliness tore out of the swing-door with a howl and flew off down platform seventeen. The heavy man's face darkened under a rich, plum-coloured flush as he deftly put back my crockery where it had come from, caught up the paper, examined it, smoothed it tenderly and slid it into a place of safety between the teapot and the hot-water jug. Then the plum shade ebbed as quickly as it had flowed, and the bland, devouring gaze once more shone its amber spotlight across the table. . . .

After forty minutes I was no nearer a solution. The beady-eyed man had described with suffocating verisimilitude an experience with the adjustment-straps of a pair of corduroy trousers, an argument with a man named Henshaw about bilateral parking in Reigate, and the demerits of several brands of razor-blade. He had passed smoothly from these material topics to a long, passionless survey of the bath-water temperatures preferred by his wife's relations and given a graphic account of a collision between a led horse and a dry-cleaner's delivery tricycle culled from a local paper in an hotel in Wimborne Minster. Throughout, the absorption of the heavy man, far from showing the least sign of flagging, had gathered in intensity. His vocabulary of encouraging interjections was an object lesson in English conversational idiom.

It was not until his strange idol suddenly caught sight of the refreshment room clock and sprang to his feet in the middle of an anecdote about string that he, for the first time, originated, or attempted to originate, a topic for discussion. Then, himself springing up, he suddenly yelled after the small, retreating figure: "Look, Mr. Dabbie—about that other matter—!"

But the beady-eyed man had gone, coat and dispatch-case flying. My eyes were not upon him, but upon the heavy man, who now sat down slowly in his chair, and even when it creaked under his weight seemed to subside still further, as it were, into himself. The light had gone out of him. He took a notebook from his pocket, studied what seemed to be a list of names and with sudden savagery struck one of them through with a dark blue pencil.

It was at that instant, I honestly think, that he saw me for the first time. He turned upon me a gaze of intense interest, and when he spoke his voice had a deep yet fluting tone.

"I wonder if I could interest you," he said, "in the subject of life assurance . . .?"

J. B. BOOTHROYD

"Good heavens, Lavinia! It says here the East Wing was burned down last night."

"It says 'Be prepared.'"

MINE OWN TRUMPETER

BOOK-jackets get thrown away and many an author has found his earlier works forgotten because he has not taken the precaution of working the blurbs right into his latest book. The technique of doing this is seen at its ripest in detective stories, where the first chapter often not only gets the reader started on the story but provides him with material for his library back-list. It works something like this:

A MAN CALLED MITRIADOPoulos-PENNYFEATHER

by

AINTREE DANE

Chapter 1

Blythe Watson looked up at her beloved chief, Mawson Parkbill, with a furrow between her heavily pencilled brows. It was twenty-four hours since any new business had come into the offices of the "En Tout Cas" Detective Agency and six months since a client had paid a bill. With hunched shoulders Parkbill was gazing out of the window, that window from which Magda had jumped to her doom, bringing the accumulated horrors of those heavy June days to a close that only Colonel Shipway, perhaps, had foreseen.¹ Dust lay thick upon the office furniture,

¹ See Kensington Gore, by Aintree Dane.

upon the bluebottle buzzing aimlessly on the linocovered walls, upon the untidy heap of holsters and wigs in the corner. A car hooted in the street. Blythe remembered that much the same had happened while they were awaiting the telephone call from the mad chaplain that led to the horrifying finale of their search for the strangler of Aunt Polk-White.²

"It is better to travel hopefully than to arrive," Parkbill drawled with the wry smile that had so often torn at Blythe's heart-strings. He was in one of his literary moods, always a certain sign that he was worried. She would never forget the streams of Buchan quotations that had accompanied the solution of the grey slippers imbroglio. For a moment she fancied herself back in the Derbyshire mists, peering from Pennine to Pennine with a cold hand clutching her heart and only the homely wisdom of the gnarled gardener to stiffen her fibre.³ "You ought to get some rest, Chiefie," she urged.

Parkbill forced a whimsical smile. "You look after me better than you look after yourself," he riposted. "When did you eat last?" "While we were waiting for the Continental boat train, to see whether or no Giles Crew were aboard, the tension gripping our throats so that we had to stick to semi-solids," she replied.⁴ "Is this a client?" Heavy boots creaked up the stair, almost drowning the noise of asthmatic breathing. A red stain spread ominously beneath the door. The dragging footstaps continued on up to the next floor. Blythe burst out "Oh, I haven't been so disappointed since that stain on the cigarette-holder turned out to be only diethylparabenzaldehyde, and had it not been for your noticing that the clock chimed backwards the raddled neck of the so-called Countess would have escaped the noose."⁵

Morosely Parkbill picked up the jade paper-knife. No need to mention what that reminded Blythe of.⁶ He slit open a few bills and let his head fall listlessly upon the hand poised to receive it. "Let's not keep thinking about clients and perhaps they'll come," he said. "A watched pot never boils."⁷ "Maybe," Blythe insisted, "at this very moment another Canon Cobday is hesitating on the stairs, prey to strange fears of he knows not what and entering upon an adventure the end of which may be no whit less strange than that macabre scene on Bexhill beach, when the crescent moon shone down on her who gambled with men's lives and lost."⁸ "Maybe," said Mawson Parkbill.

By a coincidence no less curious than most, it was at this very moment that a client did arrive. Announcing himself brusquely as Peter Walkwind, linen broker, of Threadneedle Street, he sat himself down with an air

² See Bash That Blonde, by Aintree Dane.

³ See Here's Blood in Your Eye, by Aintree Dane.

⁴ See Scalpels for Two, by Aintree Dane.

⁵ See A Dagger in the Deb, by Aintree Dane.

⁶ See Dolichocephalic Death, by Aintree Dane.

⁷ See The Boys' Book of Thermodynamics, by Aintree Dane.

⁸ See Tubby's Doom, by Aintree Dane.

of self-possession and gazed about him shrewdly. "This office is one of my disguises," said Parkbill hurriedly. Mr. Walkwind gave a curt nod and began "I was recommended to you by an old crony of mine whom you saved from being murdered by a Fiend in Human Shape called, if I recollect, Elspeth Budge." I have been receiving anonymous parcels. Every Tuesday for the last ten weeks a volume of the Encyclopædia Britannica, Seventh Edition, has arrived by post, addressed in block letters. What, Mr. Parkbill, can I expect when the set is complete? That is the question that haunts me as I lie awake at night."

"Is the sender's name inside?" asked Parkbill. "We must not neglect the obvious."¹⁰

"Come home with me, Mr. Parkbill," replied the client, "and I will let you see the volumes for yourself."

Skipping happily, Blythe led the way to the door. Their luck had turned at last.

R. G. G. PRICE

⁹ See Who Creaked Cora? by Aintree Dane.

¹⁰ See The Purloined Letter: Edited, with Notes and Exercises, by Aintree Dane.

THE SHEPHERDS IN THE BEAUTIFUL PLAINS

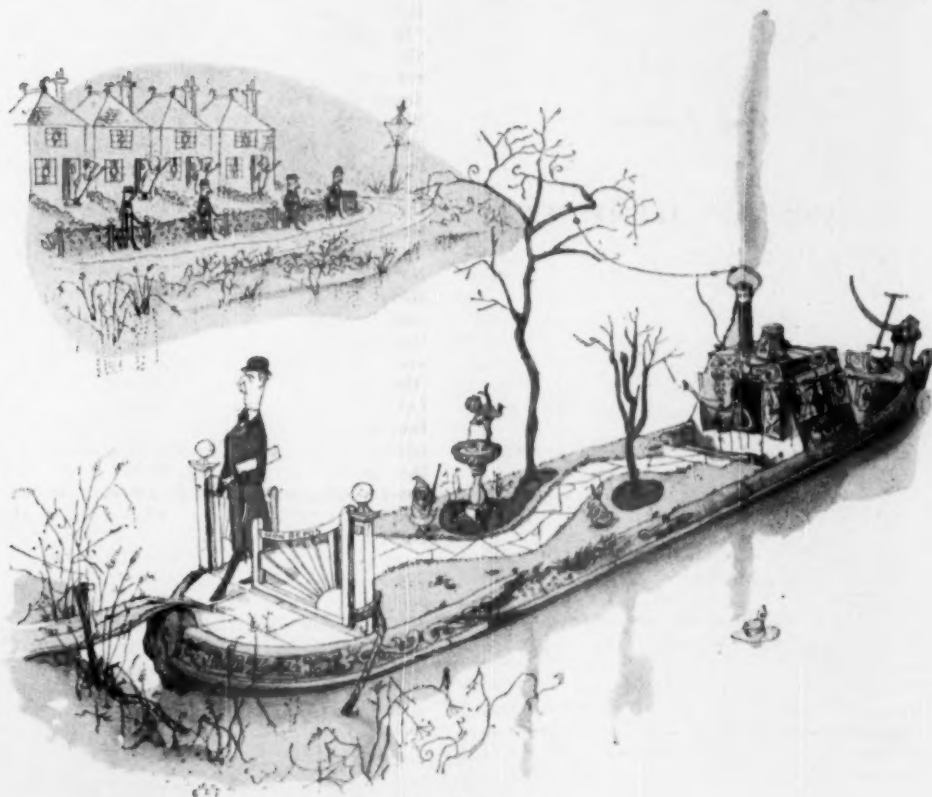

"The shepherds in the beautiful plains o' Egypt and Babylon were the first persons wot paid much attention to the stars," observed Mr. Jorrocks, "partly for want of amusement, not having no theatres, nor masquerades, nor circuses to go to, and partly to enable them to scrimmage about the country at nights."—Hillingdon Hall.

THE shepherds scrimmaged; and the laughing stars Danced round them, and they knew not where they went.

In wilderness and thankless desert pent,
Long exiled, yearning for the great bazaars,
The crowds, the hubbub, and the brimming jars
Of ruby wine—small wonder that they spent
Long nights of vigil, studious and intent,
Tracing the steps of Sirius and Mars,

Alphard and Betelgeuse, until their eyes,
Half dazzled, learned to mark and recognize
The changeless constellations and the vain
And fickle planets. So at last, grown wise,
The shepherds scrimmaged; and the charted skies
Danced round their heads, and led them home again.

R. P. LISTER

TIDINGS

IN the Dogger's swirls
Where the current whirls
The hapless swarms of fry,
I dream of the sunlit harbours
I knew in the months gone by.
For the sand eel and the squid peel
And the slivers of silver scales
No longer drift
As a guileless gift
That the tyro's hand impales.

On the Goodwin Shoal
Where the simple sole
Has never put hook to mouth,
I wait for the summer season
To come to the shores of the South.
For the rag worm and the lug worm
And the mussel dangling free
But thinly fall
From the harbour wall
And raggedly fringe the quay.

When the boats ply
And the flags fly
I shall swim to the rod-ring'd piers,
Where fishermen flail
From the crowded rail
(To tunes from "The Gondoliers"):
For the gay life is the short life
Nor sad is the inshore wave
When all may dine
From a baited line—
At the risk of a waterless grave.

FURNITURE ON THE EASY SIDE

MY visit to Attingham Park and my participation in a "Residential Course for Furniture Salesmen" were the pleasant by-products of an ugly rumour. It all began when a man with whom I am barely on nodding terms ran across the Strand to tell me that our retail salesmen and buyers "are partly responsible for whatever is poor or mediocre in modern industrial design." Those were his very words.

Well, you could have knocked me down with the proverbial unit of plomage.

"Hold on!" I said. "I wasn't born yesterday, you know."

"It's right," he said. "I got it from a most reliable source. It seems that in many industries the manufacturer is dead keen to supply the public with improved design, and the customer is anxious to buy it, but the ambitions of both parties are thwarted by the retailer. I thought you'd be shocked."

"Which industries?" I said.

"Lots. Furniture for a start."

"And the retailer is the niggard in the wood-pile, eh?"

"That's it. A bit of a shaker, isn't it?"

Needless to say I am not the kind of person that accepts a rumour at its face value; the very next morning found me in the Euston Road before the window of a largish furniture store. The goods on view were revolting. There was a bedroom suite ("Only £4 19s. 6d. per month") coated with graying-browning and heavily encrusted with pimply beading; there was a "refectory-type" table with swollen ankles, bulbous knees and an "antique finish" (the stain had been applied unevenly to suggest donkey's years of ineffectual dusting and polishing), and a settee of shapeless pomposity festooned with tassels.

"Why not step inside, sir," said a voice at my elbow, "and take a look at our special display of modern furniture? No obligation of course . . ."

He showed me a set of mock-Chippendale chairs with tortuous, tortuous backs.

"You haven't any outsize antimacassars to go with them?" I said.

"They've gone right out, sir, antimacassars. Didn't you know?"

"Hm. Well, have you anything a little lighter in tone? I like to see what kind of wood a chair's made from. This is wood, I suppose?"

"We don't stock utility, if that's what you mean. But feel the weight, sir. Real value for money there. Look nice anywhere."

"Unfortunately," I said, "I don't buy my furniture by weight."

"Would a nice easy chair covered in period hard-wearing tapestry interest you? This one's a beauty. I don't mind telling you I've got two of them in my own home."

"May I try it?" I said, lowering myself accurately enough, as I thought, between the huge cylindrical arms . . . I levered myself up and tried again. This time I made it: as I descended the friction on both flanks was equal.

"Not particularly wide, is it?" I said.

To his great credit he avoided the obvious riposte. "Well, you don't want a chair to take up too much room, sir, do you?" he said.

I stretched out my arms to encompass the full width of the squabby useless arms and looked meaningly at him. He lowered his eyes.

He took my extended hand and pulled me to my feet. The easy chair detached itself and clattered to the parquet.

"Nothing else to show me?" I said.

He walked slowly towards the door and I followed.

"Strictly between ourselves," he said. "I haven't got two of them at home. They stink."

At that moment our brief business acquaintance suddenly ripened into lasting friendship, and within half an hour he had loaded me with useful information about such things as glue, veneers, block-board, dovetailing and tenoning machines, easy payments, dust-traps, grain, cellulose, bentwood and burrs.

I was not yet in a position, however, either to scotch or to substantiate the ugly rumour, so I rang up the Council of Industrial Design and was immediately invited to a gathering of furniture salesmen at Attingham Park. I stuffed a tooth brush and a few assorted chisels and planes into my hold-all and hurried to Shrewsbury, to a handsome eighteenth-century mansion which is now the property of the National Trust and the headquarters of the Shropshire Adult College.

Some forty or fifty salesmen and buyers, drawn from shops all over the country, were assembled at this beauty-spot to hear lectures on "The History of Furniture Design," "Making Furniture by Hand," "The Selection and Use of Timber," "Making Furniture by Machine," and "Upholstered Furniture," to discuss every aspect of furniture design, and to consume some well-tempered college pudding.

It was all most instructive and enjoyable, but I shall confine my report on the proceedings to a selection of verbatim notes made during the discussions . . .

Q. "If the general level of internal heating in houses is improved should the moisture content of timber be reduced?"

A. "Yes, in America the moisture content of furniture is lower than in Britain—ten per cent or less against our twelve or fourteen per cent."

(Somebody suggested that a moisture content of twenty per cent would not be considered de trop in Manchester. Somebody else told how an English piano which had been exported to Canada and subjected to central over-heating had exploded violently during a Chopin recital, scattering octaves over a wide area.)

Q. "Is it not possible to make three-piece suites with backs high enough to provide a head-rest? Or do restrictions prevent this?"

A. "There are no restrictions; but most designers seem incapable of producing a chair or settee with an adequate back without ruining the proportions of the furniture."

(This seemed to support the assertion of my friend in Euston Road that anti-macassars have gone out of fashion.)

Q. "Shops can't afford to take risks. Until the public is must not do is to treat the past as a quarry from which we can extract designs ready-made and without cost. The reproduction or adaptation of period pieces is a confession of weakness, shiftlessness and lack of confidence in our own abilities."

Q. "Do you think that machine-made furniture will ultimately be as good as hand-made furniture?"

A. "Yes, but not if it is judged by the same standards. Good machine-made furniture lacks some of the qualities of hand-made furniture but has others that are equally desirable or necessary."

(At this point I rose nervously to my feet and put my one and only question.)

Q. "Er—I wonder if you could possibly let me know whether there is any truth in the ugly rumour that . . ."

A. "I'm sorry, but we have already exceeded our time-limit, and I'm sure you're all anxious to get back to your shops. Thank you."

BERNARD HOLLOWOOD

trained to ask for goods of better design retailers will not be able to supply them. Don't you agree?"

A. "No. The public will not ask for what it has never had an opportunity to see."

(At a rough estimate I should say that sixty-eight per cent of those present, including myself, applauded this unequivocal reply.)

Q. "Isn't it a fact that all our best designs are traditional or 'period'?"

A. "What we

"Ah, here comes the gentleman who usually helps us."

CARNET DU BAL

I HAVE turned up an old dance programme, midget pencil and bit of blue fluff still intact. As I glance down the entries a name hits me in the eye, a name in a neat but immature hand—Veronica Hornbill. It comes four times.

I can picture the set-up fairly clearly. I am somewhere between eight and twelve. My sister, whose hair is getting ready to go up, and myself have been driven to a young people's dance by Coddington, with the back of whose neck we have been connected by speaking tube. Carnations and gypsophila in a slender silver vase and a tasselled blind at the back conspire to make leaving the car even more harrowing than leaving home. Nothing has come of my suggestion that we should take a short cut through Black Devil Bog.

For the last furlong we have proceeded between fairy lights, and now we are ushered into a house that would just about stupefy the young people of to-day. In one direction our way is barred by great copes of chrysanthemums, in another by mountainous moussets. In the conservatory are provocative little palm-girt alcoves lit by Chinese lanterns. We are glared at through lorgnettes and half blinded by tiaras. It is quite possible that one of us will get mislaid in the clock tower on the way back from the cloakroom.

An angel glittering with pins takes my regulation overcoat. I know that she is the last person I shall talk to for the next four hours without a sense of strain. We are late (the entries begin at number six), so with luck we shall not be announced, which will stave off the moment when I am paired off with one of the poor things whom nobody, after carefully sifting the evidence, has asked to dance.

In the hall I am handed a programme—this very one. With it I am supposed to buzz from girl to girl, many of them no doubt in the very act of laughing into the eyes of large men, and beg them for dances. But I am not on that sort of terms with any of the people here. My only proper friends outside the family are Nannie and a kindly old retired General. Besides, no one will have anything to offer now except the second extra. As for the little dusky-trusty-vivid-true types with coral necklaces, they seem to come with their programmes already filled up, so presumably if one wants to dance with one of them one communicates by post.

When my sister shows up there is a onestep going on, so I drag her into the ballroom and push her round like a pram. I have given up trying to apply the principles learnt at Miss Congerhill's dancing class. Unless you keep completely clear of your partners you continually get implicated in what they have learnt at their dancing classes, and anyway it's all so different without Miss Congerhill's record of "Yes, we have no bananas."

While we are sitting out, Jumbo Carstairs, or one of that crowd, comes and whisks my sister away. Oh, roll on the day when I can say "Thankee" and have platinum studs and patent-leather hair like Jumbo Carstairs! This is one of the moments I have been dreading most. I cannot go on sitting out by myself. I haven't the gumption to settle down in the library with Mr. Sponge's Sporting Tour like the Mullins boy or to go and hobnob with all the Coddingtons below stairs. The only alternatives are to hurry about craning my neck in search of an imaginary partner or to make a bolt for the grounds.

But it seems that I get no option. People are lying in wait for me, wanting to know if I have met Veronica Hornbill. Yes, I have met Veronica. I am usually introduced to her at about this point. She doesn't enjoy dances any more than I do. At home she probably jogs along as happily with her bull-terrier (we never speak but I sense a very old bull-terrier) as I do with my cigarette-cards and my secret potato plot. But here we both have Persecution Mania. We are enemies of society and of each other. It would be difficult to think up a more frightful fate for us than dressing us up, joining us together and driving us into the arena to dance the Black Bottom; unless perhaps it would be forcing us to sit out together in a palm-girt alcove without any prospect of being able to get away from each other.

On this occasion we stay together right through supper until number ten when V. Hornbill gives place to P. Ottingshed. Number eleven I have with my sister, and for number twelve, a polka, I engage with a Mrs. Waddilove. It is quite a common thing for me to have the polkas with large, warm women who propose themselves. They wear tortoiseshell combs in their hair that drop out during the dance and quantities of black net that I am given sheaves of to hold.

Number thirteen—V. Hornbill. Number fourteen—H. Othouse, followed by Sir Roger de Coverley which evidently causes most of my shyness to evaporate as I take part in all the last four dances without once having recourse to my sister. The names of my partners are J. Gaynor, C. Bow, B. Balfour and, for the gallop, M. Pickford.

Oddly enough, though, what I remember most vividly about those dances (apart from the potting sheds and the hot-houses) are the loose boxes, the apple rooms and, in one macabre instance, the Elizabethan maze during a deluge. Another interesting thing is that if, as sometimes happens even to-day, I am handed a programme at a dance, I start, stagger back, sag at the jaw and wobble at the knees exactly as though I am reviving the Charleston. DANIEL PETTIWARD

CIVIL SERVANT

HE was one of those senior Civil Servants comic artists love to caricature.

In real life not too noticeably correct in the crease of his trousers or the stiffness of his linen.

He wore glasses, naturally, above a nose bony, it is true, but not hooked.

In short, he obviously was just what he looked.

He was a trifle uneasy with me, as I with him, I expect.

But over the cornflakes, set in that quiet sort of London hotel where the likes of him and the likes of me meet, when we met

he seemed human enough.

We passed the time of day, and the salt from right to left, and the marmalade from left to right.

Then silence.

For want of anything else to say I asked: Have you seen the fountains in Trafalgar Square floodlit by night?

He gave me an official stare.

His jaws—the caricaturists are accurate, they are lantern jaws—

continued to masticate,

and at last he gave me his opinion,

Government-deliberate:

"Yes"—

he nodded his administrative head—

"a great waste of money."

He shovelled in another ladle of cornflakes.

"And very childish," he said.

God of Prigs, impute no sin to my Rabelisian grin.

But when, by floodlight, the Nightmare,

scattering cornflakes o'er his hair,

de-bags him in Trafalgar Square—

may I be there: may I be there!

R. C. SCRIVEN

"Well, if you must know—it's to 'The Times' about inadequate rescue facilities on the high seas."

AT THE PLAY

To Dorothy, a Son (SAVOY)The Children's Hour

(NEW BOLTONS)

If you were asked to write a farcical comedy around the birth of an unpunctual baby, whose mother must play a dominant part though unseen except for her hands, I think you would reply that such a proposition was simply not on. Yet Mr. ROGER MACDOUGALL has succeeded in fulfilling these conditions with tact and the liveliest humour. To Dorothy, a Son is sometimes perilously slight, but whenever one begins to fear for Mr. MACDOUGALL he calls the unexpected most expertly to his rescue, and his dialogue would carry wittily even a more fragile burden.

Much of the sparkle of this production is due to the ingenious business introduced in abundance by Mr. PETER ASHMORE, and to Miss ELIZABETH AGOMBAR's clever set. Poor impatient Mrs. Rigi, sick of an athletic programme, has retired to bed upstairs, with her back to us, in a room walled off but visible when lit. She is petulant and exacting,

(To Dorothy, a Son)

Expectation

Toni Rigi—Mr. RICHARD ATTENBOROUGH
Myrtle—Miss YOLANDE DONLAN

Accusation

(The Children's Hour)

Mrs. Amelia Tilford—Miss MARY MERRALL; Mary Tilford—Miss DOROTHY GORDON
Karen Wright—Miss JOAN MILLER; Martha Dobie—Miss JESSICA SPENCER

and her husband, an impoverished composer, spends more time on the stairs than at his piano. With the reappearance of his first wife, who settles in, comes the news that their divorce was invalid; and not until much later does he discover that in fact they were never married. Further, the first Mrs. Rigi's uncle has left him a million dollars if he has a son within twelve months of the uncle's death. It thus becomes a needle match with the obstetric imponderables. The fatal hour passes, but Mr. Rigi desperately recalls the glad difference between American time and ours. Perhaps you can guess the end, though up his sleeve the author has yet another good ace.

The acting of this agreeable nonsense leaves nothing to be desired. Miss SHEILA SIM makes crystal clear the character of the invisible Mrs. Rigi, Miss YOLANDE DONLAN is consistently funny as the dumb but spirited intruder, and Mr. RICHARD ATTENBOROUGH, playing the husband with indomitable solemnity, sums up nobly for fathers. The scene in which he endeavours to explain Einstein to Miss DONLAN will make this a far happier Christmas.

Mr. PETER COTES' delicate production of Miss LILLIAN HELLMAN'S The Children's Hour makes one regret again the intransigence of the Lord Chamberlain which still denies it a public stage. To bar a fine play that treats a serious human problem seriously and at the same time to permit the erotic rubbish that often floods the West End is indefensible. Here is a piece by which any thinking adult must be moved. It deals with the innocent attachment of two women, one of whom, under the pressure of public suspicion, finds in herself what is suspected, and commits suicide. It grips with the power of melodrama, but cuts much deeper to discover the true springs of compassion. The weakness in the plot which allows the grandmother to ruin the two school-mistresses on the word of a child is not helped by the intelligence which Miss MARY MERRALL cannot conceal; a more emotional actress might have glossed it better, but few could have brought to the part Miss MERRALL's exquisite sincerity. As the mistresses Miss JOAN MILLER and Miss JESSICA SPENCER give beautiful performances, Miss DOROTHY GORDON chills the blood with her abysmally St. Trinian's little girl, and the young doctor whose life is wrecked is taken well by Mr. DAVID MARKHAM.

Recommended

Brightly restored, the Old Vic has re-opened bravely with a richly comic Twelfth Night. Two sound comedies with thought behind them are His Excellency (Piccadilly) and The Holly and the Ivy (Duchess), the first political and the second domestic.

ERIC KEOWNS

THE NEW EDUCATION

MY DEAR SON,—Mother will give you the money for the two new tyres for your bicycle, but do please find something interesting to tell me in your next letter. After all, with all the money spent to-day on education, there surely must be something you can write about. Tell me about your teachers. Your old dad never had the luck to go to one of these secondary schools. So come on. Something about the school, and don't always ask for money.

Your affectionate Dad

DEAR DAD,—Thanks for the tyres. They've come just in time, for the old ones are down to their last threads. You ask me to tell you something about the teachers at my new secondary school. This is some job, for, honestly, Dad, I've been here six months and can't even tell you what they look like. Nor can any of the chaps. You see, none of us have ever seen their faces. In fact we don't often hear their voices.

You are always telling me that things were much different in your days. Well, education must have been. For to-day we are taught by Visual Aids. In every classroom there is a sound-film projector, a film-strip projector, an epidiascope and an episcope.

The whole school is in darkness. I heard the caretaker telling one of the cooks that it is a waste of time opening the curtains, and so he leaves them always closed. But you soon get used to the darkness, and it is amazing how good you become at finding your way about. I haven't barked my shins for weeks.

Some of the films are jolly fine. Those I like best are those on Arithmetic, Algebra and Geometry, while French Grammar and Music are not at all bad. All the boys like the Maths films. When I think of the time we used to spend in working out long division and simultaneous equations it makes me boil. Now we just sit back and watch it on the screen.

The film strips are rather patchy. Some of them are deadly dull. The worst show I've struck so far was the French Revolution and insect life with the epidiascope.

"Now, if all three are there, he's somewhere around the office. If the hat's gone, he's at elevenses; if the hat and umbrella's gone, he's at lunch; if they've all gone, he's left for the day."

Fortunately you don't have to sit too long through a dud show. You can always creep out, and go into another room where life is more exciting. It is better to crawl than walk across the floor when doing this, so that you don't throw a shadow on the screen.

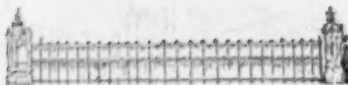

The kids in class "B" are very good at this, and they work like a team. The other day Mr. Carson, who always seems to get hold of good films, was showing one on Convoys. Just after it started "B" class swarmed in like ants. They must have got fed up with their film. They hardly made a sound as they crawled over the floor, although some of them must have given their heads some fearful clouts as they banged into each other in the darkness. Just before the end one of them coughed. It must have been the agreed signal, for they all started to wriggle back as silently as they came.

Two of the teachers have left the school during the last month and are working at cinemas. The caretaker told Dick that another is thinking of leaving as the pay is much more.

Anyhow, Dad, I don't go to the pictures now, so I ought to have some money in the bank by Christmas.

Your affectionate Son.

IMPRESSIONS OF PARLIAMENT

Monday, November 27th

Mr. ANSERIN BEVAN is never far from the Parliamentary limelight, whether he is present in the Chamber of the Commons or not. To-day he was not present, but the fierce light that beats about a Ministry sought him out just the same.

It appeared that Mr. B. had made some statements at an "off-the-record" luncheon party to United States journalists, and that the journalists had thereupon printed reports that there was a "split" in the Cabinet—led by Mr. B.—on the question of rearmament, and paying for it. Considerable transatlantic excitement followed this announcement, and several Members tabled questions. And Mr. ATTLEE attended in person to deal with the matter.

When the time came he rose and, in the special staccato manner he reserves for such occasions (rather like the sound of ice being dropped in a tumbler), replied that he, "of course," supported any statement issued by his officials on his behalf. This referred not to Mr. B.'s statement but to the Prime Minister's Chief Press Officer's denial that Mr. B. was mixed up in a non-existent Cabinet split. When the questioner pressed the matter the Prime Minister snapped that he "quite agreed that these inaccurate reports were very unfortunate."

Round One to the Prime Minister.

But then another Opposition Member complained that these off-the-record "revelations of the personal views of Ministers" were highly dangerous to international relations.

Mr. ATTLEE replied that he was not going to lay down hard and fast rules and that Mr. BEVAN had not given a Press interview. The House listened for the normal allegation that the Minister had been misreported. But Mr. ATTLEE surprised his hearers by adding mildly that there had been a misunderstanding and some mistake.

"And," said he, firmly, "the Minister did not commit any indiscretion!"

When the various conflicting emotions aroused by this comment had expressed themselves, fortissimo, Mr. ATTLEE added magnanimously that he did not accuse the Pressmen of dishonourable conduct either.

Having seen his Health Minister across what might have been a rather dangerous road Mr. ATTLEE listened attentively while Mr. ALFRED BARNES, his Transport

Impressions of Parliamentarians

Lord Woolton

Minister, gave details of a new plan for better but fewer pedestrian crossings. Fewer and better appears, by the way, to be the new slogan of the Government, for a little earlier the Food Ministry's representative had announced that the only complaints that had been received about "Webb Sausages" were that they were not numerous enough. And fewer but better sausages was the order of the day.

Mr. BARNES's version of the slogan was that a good many of the pedestrian crossings were to go, as being little used and—as the Minister of Labour would say—"redundant." Those that remained, however, would either have a policeman to see that they were given due honour or else a gay striped design of black and white, which (so the Minister said) had a strong psychological effect on the drivers of cars, making them cautious and courteous.

But the Minister was determinedly coy about the possibility of ordering that the pedestrian be dealt with by the law for disregarding a crossing or stepping out in front of vehicles. That, said Mr. BARNES firmly, was a legal matter.

Tuesday, November 28th

Both Houses had grave and intensely interesting debates to-day, on subjects into which religious convictions and conscience entered largely. Their Lordships were discussing the vexed question of euthanasia, more familiarly known as "mercy-killing." The Commons were debating the proposed opening on Sundays of the Festival of Britain fun fair.

The debates were, on the whole, worthy of the subjects they covered. Lord CHORLEY raised the discussion in the Lords, and was opposed by the Archbishop of York and the Lord Chancellor, from their different viewpoints. The many possible dangers of authorized killing were stressed, and, at the close of a sincere and moving debate, Lord CHORLEY dropped his motion favouring voluntary euthanasia.

The Commons had a more robust and hard-hitting way of dealing with Sunday opening. The proposal came before the House as part of the Bill to permit the Festival of Britain exhibition generally to open on Sundays. This Bill was given a Second Reading a week ago, on the clear understanding that that did not signify approval of the opening of the fun fair.

To-day the Whips were off on both sides—which meant that the gloves were off, too, and that conscience might make heroes of them all. And they certainly did not waste their unaccustomed freedom. Ministers sat in a long row on the Treasury Bench, cheering like mad

"Sir, the foreign assistant has just vanished in a cloud of brimstone."

—on opposite sides. Tory fought Tory, Socialist fought Socialist. The Liberals alone (so far as could be noted) seemed united on the issue.

MR. GEORGE THOMAS, from Cardiff, started the battle by moving, from the Government benches, that the Sunday opening be not permitted. His case—the strict Sabbatarian one—was made with sincerity and Celtic fervour, for this was not, he said, a trifling issue. And he foresaw the spread of fun fairs all over the (at present) peaceful land, once the Government itself backed this one in London.

MR. JAMES HUDSON, sitting just behind Mr. THOMAS, complained strongly that the proposal his Party colleague had put forward tried to make the nation righteous by compulsion—a "revolting" thought, he said. So it went on, the cut and thrust of debate, until Mr. HERBERT MORRISON, whose hard work has largely been responsible for the Festival arrangements, rose and said mildly that there would be no amplified music in the fun fair. In fact, he gave the impression that the fun fair would be as silent as was the Government during the whole of the debate. But everybody agreed that the Government was right to leave the issue to a really free vote, without so much as a hint of the way the Government (or even the majority of the Government) wanted it to go.

Half-way through the division Mr. WYATT wanted to raise a point of order and, having perforce to be "seated and covered" (as laid down in the rules), he borrowed the only available hat, the jaunty black velvet beret of Miss JENNIE LEE. He said some Members had voted, in error, in the wrong lobby—whereat the respective official Whips smiled grimly—but Major JAMES MILNER, in the Chair, said he could do nothing about it, the choice of lobby being one for the individual Member's conscience and intelligence.

The vote over, Mr. THOMAS and his fellow-tellers lined up before the Table, bowed with as much freedom from unison as the division itself had shown, and announced the result: For Sunday opening, 134; against, 389.

MR. THOMAS was so delighted with the result that he skipped nimbly off to collect congratulations—and had to be hauled boisterously back into line until Major MILNER had announced the figures from the Chair. Mr. MORRISON accepted the position with a resigned, if disappointed, shrug.

Wednesday, November 29th

MR. ERNEST BEVIN, looking pale but more vigorous than of late, opened a debate on foreign policy with a tour of the world, pausing at the numerous trouble-spots.

The fact that he had a trouble-spot of his own on the Government back-benches, where the better part of a hundred M.P.s had signed motions implying criticism of his policy, added piquancy to the debate. But over all hung the grim shadow of events in Korea, and the numerous that might yet stem from that shadow. So it was a serious and sober debate, to which Mr. EDEN made a measured and powerful contribution.

"To what do you attribute your good luck in winning this enormous prize, Mrs. Bodger?"

ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON IS FACED WITH THE ORDEAL OF CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

XXIV

WITH trembling hand I op'd the door
And mingled with the mingling throng
That away'd and surg'd and swept along
My steps upon the echoing floor.

No rest had I: on moving stair
I upward slop'd from stage to stage,
Or prison'd in the lattic'd cage
Shot up, like flame, from here to there.

One thought, and then another, toss'd
The questing and inconstant mind,
And urg'd the will that could not find
Its goal, or finding, fear'd the cost.

An hour I studied, here and here,
The presents, but selected none,

Save only two, for Arthur one,
Another one for Guinevere;

No more. A voice made echo "What?
No more! But other friends remain;
What have you bought for proud Elaine,
For Galahad and Lancelot?"

And in my heart I question'd Where,
And weigh'd the sum of When and Why;
From lift and floor came no reply,
No answer from the moving stair.

So thro' the dark I went alone,
And heard a calmer accent fall,
That inly counsel'd "Send them all
A cheque, and let them buy their own."

G. H. VALLINS

BOOKING OFFICE

Cactus Blooms

IN Rude Assignment Mr. Wyndham Lewis reviews, modifies and defends the opinions he has expressed during a fighting life of nearly forty years. He confesses that his controversial writing is sometimes "slipshod" and, unfortunately, what might have been a great apologia turns out to be a hurried and ramshackle communiqué on the war between Mr. Lewis and the enemies by whom he feels himself encompassed. After all, however much resentment his critical attacks may have caused at the time, he has usually won his case in the long run. If he has not made much direct impression on the philistines, he has had a very considerable influence on those sufficiently intelligent to appreciate his skill in diagnosing their weaknesses; he has permeated the heaven and thus, indirectly, the lump. He is particularly concerned to repel the allegation that he is a Fascist; the charge was never very convincing, and as it was made far back in the days of the "Popular Front" it should surely not worry him now.

The core of Rude Assignment is political. Mr. Lewis no longer feels that Western civilization is capable of defence and advocates World Government, while still believing that all government is bad. It is a pity that he has not devoted either more or less attention to politics. His metaphysical mind is at home in criticism of the political theorists; but he does not seem to have studied the theories in action. He is too impatient of history and sociology. When he is criticizing Philosophies of Time or the Myth of the Noble Savage in its modern form he knows the object of his attack at first hand, whereas his knowledge of political and economic institutions is intermittent and casual. He has an unpolitical mind. As his honesty will not allow him to take the fashionable escape route into Anarchism he gives the impression of floundering about, and his hard, keen intellect does not flounder gracefully.

The disappointingly short autobiographical section of the book will entertain the gossip, and of course for the historian of contemporary ideas the whole volume is important; but one cannot help wishing that Mr. Lewis would stop frittering away his time in conflict with opponents who are too insignificant to call out his full powers as a satirist. His novels and his pictures, of which a small selection is reproduced here, form his permanent, positive contribution, while his polemics are bound to be ephemeral, unless they are, as they sometimes used to be, themselves works of Art.

Mr. Geoffrey Grigson's autobiography, The Crest on the Silver, is consciously and successfully a work of Art. You do not have to be particularly interested in the influence of Mr. Grigson on his times to enjoy it, though it is an important source for the history of criticism in the last two decades. Like Mr. Lewis, whom he admires, Mr. Grigson is a polemical writer. He hits hard and true at what he feels to be false and dangerous, but he also establishes his positive loyalties. While his autobiography is not, thank goodness, mellow, it only occasionally gives its readers the fun of seeing an expert swordsman rip up his contemporaries. Indeed, Mr. Grigson now expresses some compunction, and more distaste, for the asperities of his "New Verse" days.

This account of the growth of a poet's mind and of the development of curiosity that widened out from Family to Place, Nature and Art is written with passion and a ruthless indifference to self-inflicted pain. Mr. Grigson has scholarship, disciplined sensibility and a thorny genius. The precision with which he invokes Cornish and other landscapes comes from the vitalizing of detailed botanical and topographical knowledge by feeling which has become diverted from persons through early experiences of emotional inadequacy in the Family. The Crest on the Silver ranges widely, and includes some amusing descriptions of Oxford and Fleet Street and a variety of artistic and amorous pursuits. However, what is important is the picture of things loved, the Cornish Rectory, the Family and the Place, where knowledge of the beloved has been drawn from ceaseless exploration by a trained intelligence that never relaxes and whose reward is a strict, almost bitter, joy.

R. G. G. PRICE

A Notable Rip

Pembroke Papers (1780-94) is a second instalment of Lord Herbert's selection from his family letters at Wilton. They give a full picture of life in a great country house, in this case shadowed by the behaviour of the tenth Earl, who reminds one, in his extravagance, perverseness and dialectic agility, of Sir George Sitwell. An authority on horses and shooting, he was a constant problem to his long-suffering son, whom he bombarded from the Continent—his amorous playground—with fatuous advice on the conduct of a heavily burdened estate. He was witty and generous, however, and, though the later legal wrangles grow tedious, many of his outrageous letters are extremely entertaining. The Court and London society are intimately reflected, since his son was Vice-Chamberlain to the King, his gentle and charming wife a lady-in-waiting to the Queen; and we are given inside glimpses of the purchase of commissions, the manipulation of local politics, and of other indefensible but picturesque institutions of the time.

R. O. D. K.

Unhappy Warrior

Sir Duff Cooper's first excursion into fiction—a very short one, with no elaborate itinerary—is, unfashionably enough, a civilized story about civilized people. It is the life story of a man born to be a soldier, whose spiritual home is his regiment, and for whom the battlefield has still the glamour of romance; but whom time and chance keep passive in both the wars and whose love, like his military ardour, is to fail of its final satisfaction. Yet Operation Heartbreak is not a tale told altogether in the negative; the detachment of its humour is tempered by a far from dispassionate humanity; and the twist in its tail is not only a surprise but a fulfilment. It is, in essence, a conte philosophique, and though Willie Maryngton, with his inarticulate idealism, could only have been an Englishman, his creator has at command the lucidity, the economy and the nicely controlled irony of the Gallic masters in that kind.

F. B.

A Box from Mudie's

"It seemed to me in those days that the patronage of Mudie's was a sort of recognition from Heaven," wrote Mrs. Oliphant, whose desperate struggle to keep a pack of helpless male relatives renders her the most pathetic of Mr. Alan Walbank's Queens of the Circulating Library. There are nine of these ladies, flourishing between 1850 and 1900; and a critical introduction, brief biographies, extracts from the novels and illustrations from "yellow-book" covers portray most entertainingly a society which, like many other societies, conditioned, and was conditioned by, its story-tellers. Charlotte Yonge heads the procession, Marie Corelli brings up the rear; Miss Braddon, Mrs. Henry Wood, Rhoda Broughton, "The Duchess," "Ouida" and Mrs. Humphry Ward swell the ranks. There is not, you observe, much progress. The only quoted books worth re-reading, except as amusing curiosities, are "The Heir of Redclyffe" and "Helbeck of Bannisdale"; and "Helbeck," the "Brideshead Revisited" of its age, deserves more respectful and accurate treatment than it gets here.

H. P. E.

"This Column"

The lure of the Thames almost overcomes Sir Alan Herbert's intention to devote a whole volume to his career in Parliament, and provocative and informative though his tales of the House may be, it is his incidental picture of real war in the lower reaches of the river, as seen from little Water Gipsy, together with a brilliant brief sketch of "Monty," his close personal friend, in action in Normandy that will stick in one's memory after reading Independent Member. In spite of his most sober triumph with the Marriage Bill and innumerable fighting sallies on behalf of common sense and Parliamentary liberty, "A. P. H." has often been accused of political levity, and it is indeed true that even serious things do strike him first and foremost funny side up—surely not a very reprehensible characteristic. He just cannot see why he should not speak the truth because it happens to be comical, and by his own admission he must have quarrelled with a record number of fellow Members. They, one and all, enjoyed the experience.

C. C. P.

Books Reviewed Above

- Trade Assignment*. Wyndham Lewis. (Hutchinson, 21/-)
The Crest on the Silver. Geoffrey Grigson. (Cresset Press, 13/-)
Pembroke Papers: 1780-94. Lord Herbert. (Capo, 25/-)
Operation Heartbreak. Duff Cooper. (Hart-Davis, 8/6)
Queens of the Circulating Library. F. Alan Walbank. (Evans Bros., 12/6)
Independent Member. Sir Alan Herbert. (Methuen, 21/-)

Other Recommended Books

- The Diaries of Lady Charlotte Guest*. Edited by her grandson, the Earl of Beaconsfield. (Murray, 18/-) Vigorous journal of a gifted woman married to an ironmaster in Wales, giving amusing glimpses of early Victorian society.
Lifemanship. Stephen Potter. (Hart-Davis, 6/-) The author of "Gamesmanship" applies its principles to "the smaller world of life." Extracts have recently been appearing in Punch.

CHRISTMAS BOOKS

for older children

THIS year there is a quantity of sound and readable books for older children, and a few that are worth keeping on the bookshelves for many years. One of these (it is for girls only) is Noel Streetfield's entertaining compendium on the art of growing up wisely and pleasantly. The Years of Grace (Evans, 15/-) is divided into sections on Home, Sport, Leisure, Careers, etc. All the articles are written by experts (among them Elizabeth Arden, Marguerite Steen and James Laver) and the editor contributes amusing introductions to each section. In future there should be no excuse for blue stockings to be wrinkled or lipstick (if it must be used) to be overdone. A Girl's Hobby Book (Falcon Press, 6/-), by Louise Fellowes, should make holidays fly, for there are articles on painting, collecting, music, fortune-telling, cooking, gardening and puppet-making. Another "girls only" book is A Dream of Sadler's Wells (Evans, 8/6), by Lorna Hill. It is an unpretentious and blessedly possible story, because its heroine does not leap to fame from the wrong side of the footlights but works for the chance of a training and shows (the book is written in the first person) a pretty sense of humour. Books for boys make books for family reading too, and one of the best is the latest in the famous "Bunkle" series, by M. Pardoe—Bunkle Went for Six (Routledge, 7/6). The engaging hero keeps his pleasant manners and shows consideration for his parents throughout the risky adventures that begin in Guernsey and end in England. It is improbable of course, but what does that matter? So is The Provost's Jewel (Peter Davies, 8/6), by Elisabeth Kyle, but how good it is. Walter Macfadyen, a newly-orphaned son of a shepherd tries his hand at sleuthing and succeeds, of course! But though the story is a great deal better and more exciting than many grown-up thrillers the charm of it lies in Walter's endearing character. He is as tough, dour, humorous and gay a boy as ever lived between pages. In Thunder Reef (Hodder and Stoughton, 8/6) Adrian Seligman (that wonderful writer of his own sailing experiences) has turned to fiction and created a family of English children who, with a French boy and girl, have adventures on and off the Breton coast. This is stern lifelike stuff, and again we have a first-rate hero in a semi-crippled lad. In comparison We Never Thought of That (Heinemann, 8/6) is milk-and-water fare, but the author, P. M. Lovell, has written a pleasant and not too impossible story about a party of young people who prolong their holiday in the South of France by hiring a café. Probably the best animal story of the year is Greatheart (Hutchinson, 8/6), by Joseph E. Chipperfield, most beautifully illustrated by C. Gifford Ambler. It is about an Alsatian puppy that runs wild after it has smelled man. Later it returns to the call of that smell, is disciplined by love, trained at a guide dog school and accepts service "day in and day out" to a blind man who needs it "as man had seldom needed a dog before." Some may consider it sentimental, others exaggerated, but the rest will love it. In This Way to Greenacres (Longmans, 8/6) Maribel Edwin keeps to the same sort of pattern. Here a leveret is tamed, runs wild and returns to its human home again. The author writes so well of country matters that it is tantalizing not to know if the end of the book has a basis of fact. Those who are worthy of it will love the latest of Opal Wheeler's enchanting books on musicians—Frederic Chopin (Faber, 9/6). She writes of the time when Warsaw was like a city in a fairy story, mentions "lovely mother Chopin," tells how people listened when "the sad-eyed musician from Poland told in melody of his beloved Poland," and describes how he died to music. Another book for specialists is Postage Stamps (Puffin Books, 1/6), by L. N. and M. Williams, which has a most attractive cover of stamps and a great deal of information. There is no information but a great deal of fun in Ian Serraillier's poetical nonsense verses, The Monster Horse (Oxford, 6/-), and this will be a treat for parents as well.

B. E. BOWER

"Here. It's a 'must' . . ."

ROUTE

IT has often been remarked that murderers look almost more like ordinary people than ordinary people, and the same applies to time-table fiends, whether Bradshaw or A.B.C. I thought when I entered the lounge of the hotel that the half-dozen people draped over the chairs and settees were just the usual flotsam and jetsam that one finds in such places.

Apparently I was wrong. From the way they responded when I innocently asked if anybody knew the best route from Mulcaster to North Wabsham I think they must all have been delegates to a conference of the Bradshaw Society or possibly the Inner Circle of the A.B.C. Club.

"Mulcaster to North Wabsham?" said a man with a red beard. "Nothing could be simpler. If you catch the 6.32 a.m. express from Mulcaster you get to Slopton Junction at 8.47. Nip over the bridge to platform four, and you will have time for a cup of tea and a yesterday's pie before getting the 8.58 slow to Lansbury. You will arrive at Lansbury at 9.53, in comfortable time to catch the 9.59 to North Wabsham, arriving at 12.42."

A growing murmur of dissent from other denizens of the lounge had almost drowned the latter part of his instructions, and as soon as he had finished a tall thin man with a contemptuous expression gave a short laugh.

"Your route would be all right, Snelling," he said, "if the 6.32 wasn't SE and the 8.58 SO. Actually the gentleman does not need to leave his bed as early as you suggest. By taking the 7.15 slow to Wigswick he can catch the 7.33 express from Wigswick to Babblesham, arriving just as the bar opens at 10.30, and giving him time for a quick one and a sausage roll before catching the 10.49. It is true that the mustard at Babblesham always has a dark-brown crust on it, but if you dig deep enough you will find it quite good. The 10.49 will get you to North Wabsham at 12.37."

A little man with a fanatical gleam in his eyes had been deep in Bradshaw, but now broke in with a shout of triumph.

"You've both forgotten," he said, "the Lunaford Loop!"

An expression of deep chagrin crossed the faces of Snelling and the tall thin man.

"You needn't leave Mulcaster until 8.13," said the little man. "You arrive at Lunaford at 8.52, and catch the 8.54 . . ."

"No time for a sandwich," objected Snelling.

"And too early for even a very quick one," said the tall thin man.

"It doesn't matter," said the little man crushingly, "because the 8.54 is R. Ample time for breakfast before you change at Diggle End at 10.7. You then cross to the Low Level station and catch the 10.25 direct to North Wabsham, arriving at 12.1."

Snelling and the thin man slunk from the room, baffled and beaten. I felt sorry to disappoint the little man in the hour of his triumph, but unless I spoke I was afraid somebody else would start, and I already had a headache.

"Perhaps I should have made it clear," I said gently, "that I am travelling by car."

D. H. BARBER

Notice.—Contributions or Communications requiring an answer should be accompanied by a stamped and addressed Envelope or Wrapper. The entire copyright in all Articles, Sketches, Drawings, etc., published in PUNCH is specifically reserved to the Proprietors throughout the countries signatory to the BERN Convention, the U.S.A., and the Argentine. Reproductions or imitations of any of these are therefore expressly forbidden. The Proprietors will, however, always consider any request from authors of literary contributions for permission to reprint. CONDITIONS OF SALE AND SUPPLY.—This periodical is sold subject to the following conditions, namely, that it shall not, without the written consent of the publishers first given, be lent, resold, hired out or otherwise disposed of by way of Trade, except at the full retail price of 6s.; and that it shall not be lent, resold, hired out or otherwise disposed of in a mutilated condition or in any unauthorised cover by way of Trade or affixed to or as part of any publication or advertising, literary or pictorial matter whatsoever.

Printed at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper. Retried at Halfpenny Mail Matter at the New York, N.Y., P.O., 1951. Postage of this issue: Gt. Britain and Ireland 2s.; Canada 1s.; elsewhere Overseas 2s. SUBSCRIPTION RATES.—Yearly, including Extra Numbers and Postage: United Kingdom 12/6; U.S.A. 35/6; Canada 34/6; elsewhere 36/6.

THERE once was a very selfish man. He had a Parker-Knoll chair which he kept all to himself, and whenever anyone said, "Please may I sit in your Parker-Knoll chair?", he would answer, "No! I have only one, and I can't buy another."

But you can buy them now, and they are being made so quickly that you can usually get one from stock, or at the worst, wait a few weeks for the model you want.

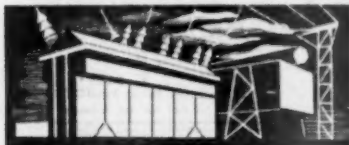

PARKER-KNOLL

PARKER-KNOLL LIMITED • TEMPLE END • HIGH WYCOMBE • BUCKS

To get the genuine article, see that the salesman writes the name "Parker-Knoll" on your receipt.

CYB-54

Since 1882 Ferranti have been pioneers in electrical engineering for industry and the home

Transformers: Voltage Regulators.
High Voltage A.C. & D.C. Testing Equipment.
Power Factor Correction Condensers.
A.C. & D.C. House Service & Switchboard Meters.
A.C. & D.C. Prepayment Meters.
Meter Testing Equipment, Electronic Devices.
Radio & Television Valves & Cathode Ray Tubes.
Measuring Instruments. Switchboard Instruments.
Electric Clocks, Summation Metering Equipments.
Clip on Ammeters, High Voltage Indicators.
Current and Voltage Transformers.
Electric Fires & Space Heaters.
Electric Water Heaters.

Ferranti Ferranti Ltd. Hollinwood, Lancs.
London Office: 36 Kingsway, W.C.2

Something Different

As a delightful alternative to gin and squash, try Gordon's Orange or Lemon Gin—they're different. Gordon's Orange and Lemon Gin can be enjoyed in many ways. Neat, they are delightful at any time. Mixed with Vermouth or Sherry they are excellent appetisers or cocktails. As a cooling drink they will be found refreshing and invigorating mixed with Tonic Water or Ginger Ale.

By Appointment
Gin (distillers)
to H.M. King George VI

BOTTLE 32/-
HALF BOTTLE 16/9d
MINIATURE 3/5d
U.K. ONLY

Gordon's

ORANGE GIN

LEMON GIN

The Perfect Pair

The Ideal Gift

IN ROLLED GOLD SILVER & NICKEL SILVER

RIGHT FOR HIM

RIGHT FOR HER

WRITE FOR EVER

from all good Jewellers & Stationers

Life-Long PROPELLING PENCILS

TWENTY SHILLINGS A BOTTLE

LISTAN PALE Sherry

You will relish this fine dry sherry and enjoy the delights to be found in its pale golden depths. Serve slightly chilled.

MACANUDO

The JAMAICA CIGAR made under the supervision of Punch Havana experts

"If you're thinking of giving your friends cigars this Christmas, take a tip my boy from a confirmed cigar smoker. The Punch Havana experts are now supervising the making of Macanudo Cigars in Jamaica."

"Really? The result should be most interesting."

"It's more than that. It's a triumph! Here, try one—a Macanudo. I'll be giving quite a few boxes this season."

Don't be vague ask first for Haig

OBTAINABLE IN ALL SIZES

No finer whisky goes into any bottle

Angostura aromatic bitters

in your Straight Rum

A DASH-OR-TWO MAKES A DELIGHTFUL DIFFERENCE...

ANGOSTURA AROMATIC BITTERS

ANGOSTURA BITTERS
(Dr. J. C. B. Siegert & Sons) LIMITED
Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, B.W.I.

RARE STAMPS

We are always interested in the purchase of rare stamps—both on and off letters. Before despatching any old family correspondence, write to:

J. E. LEA
14 Exchange Street, MANCHESTER 2
Please list on request.

Take my Tip!

Protect your hands with

Andy

GARDEN GLOVES

6/11 per pair from all Ironmongers and Stores, or direct 5/2 post free to the above.

TEDSON, THORNLEY & CO., ROCHDALE

THE MORRIS HOT WATER TOWEL RAIL AND HEATER

Prov. Pat. No. 10645 56.

Economical, Odourless and Safe.

Operated by the proved and well-known efficient paraffin oil-burner Morris Hot Water Burner for Bathroom, Nursery, Bedroom or Kitchen—on installation costs—running costs approximately 1d. per hour—dimensions 40 ins. high, 36 ins. wide, 17 ins. deep—simply fixed by screwing to floor—4 beautiful finishes—

Enamelled Cream . . . 49 9s. 6d.
Chromium Plated and Cream . . . 51 11s. 6d.
Manufacturers and Exporters

MORRIS HEATING APPLIANCES LTD.
Dept. P. 5, Metheron Grove, London.
Telephone: FLAXman 6323. S.W. 10

XMAS GIFTS

for him...

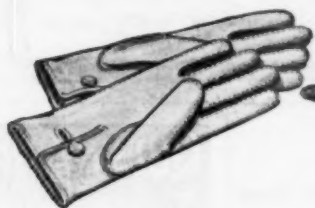

How about handkerchiefs?
Hand rolled pure Irish linen £2.5.0 per box of 6, or 7/6 each

Does he care for comfort? Suede 'Jester' slipper with leather lining and sole. Black, navy, bottle green or wine. Sizes 6-12. £2.14.0

Has he feet? Wool and nylon socks, discreetly handsome in plain colours (saxe blue, maroon, fawn, navy, brown, mid-grey or yellow). Sizes 10-12. 8/6

For his hands? Unlined gloves of finest hogskin. £2.10.10

Does he lounge? In lightweight wool with neat design, in wine, green, and dark blue ground. £11.1.11

Does he smoke? Handsome pigskin cigarette cases keep cigarettes in perfect condition and are a pleasure to see. £2.13.6 to £5.2.0

Does he carry documents? Impressive and capacious golden tan briefcase with white stitching. £8.7.0

Has he papers?
Then this fine pigskin wallet with silver gilt corners. £4.19.6

Does he wear evening clothes?
Correctly handsome Dress set, fancy mother-of-pearl. £2.5.0

from Simpson
PICCADILLY

Simpson (Piccadilly) Ltd
202 Piccadilly London W.1 Regent 2002

remembrance  means so much

Five shillings will send a short social cable anywhere in the Commonwealth.

Hand in or 'phone your cables to any Cable & Wireless or Postal Telegraph office.

CABLES cost so little

CABLE AND WIRELESS SERVICES

ELECTRIC IDEAS FOR

Christmas presents

Here are some Merry Christmas ideas for you, your friends and family. See them at any Electricity Service Centre, Stores or Electrical Contractors

SOPHISTICATED KETTLE

Price 70/- (no purchase tax)

THE IRON WITH THE HEADLAMP

Price 45/- (no purchase tax)

CRED ACADEMY

Price £15. 10. 0 (no P.T.)

Creda domestic appliances

MADE BY THE HOUSE OF Simplex

Simplex Electric Company Limited
Oldbury Birmingham and Branches

A COMPANY

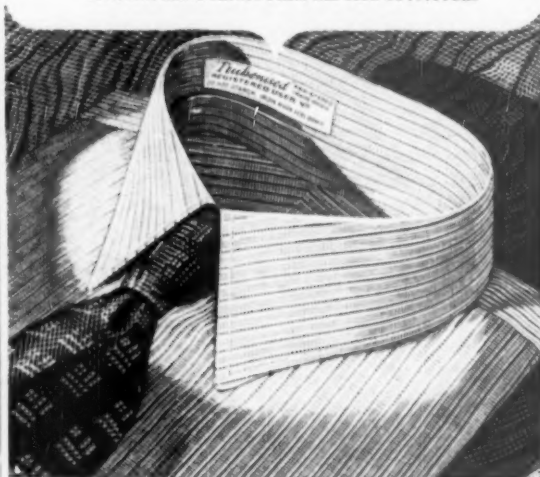

SOMEONE YOU KNOW IS HOPING FOR A SPARKLETS REFILLABLE SYPHON

It's smart, it's thrifty, it's refillable! It's the gift that goes on giving—the present with a future! Choose the finish to match the scheme: chromium—with red, green, or black relief, or silver-grey with red or green. Handsomely boxed—Price 7s. 6d. complete with drip tray. From chemists and stores, or illustrated leaflet from Dept. W, Sparklets Ltd. London, N. 18.

"Trubenised" and smart all day

REGISTERED TRADE MARK

"TRUBENISED" BRAND COLLARS ARE AVAILABLE WITH MATCHING SHIRTS FROM ALL GOOD OUTFITTERS

The registered Trade Mark "Trubenised" distinguishes a brand of fused semi-stiff wearing apparel made and processed under agreement with the proprietors:—TRUBENISED (Cl. Britain) LTD., 39 PARK STREET, LONDON, W.1

QUEEN ANNE SCOTCH WHISKY

HILL THOMSON & CO. LTD. EDINBURGH Est. 1793

Holders of Royal Appointment to successive Sovereigns since 1838

H.R. Harmer Ltd.
INTERNATIONAL STAMP AUCTIONEERS
CATALOGUES OF WEEKLY SALES
6s. EACH, POST FREE
39-42 NEW BOND ST LONDON, W.1
AND AT NEW YORK • TEL. MAYFAIR 0210

You will enjoy viewing in comfort our fascinating display of Christmas gifts

4/5 Burlington Arcade

PROBAILLY W.I.

FINE CUTLERY · COCKTAIL ACCESSORIES AND CABINETS · TOILET BRUSHWARE FOR MEN AND WOMEN · QUALITY LEATHER AND FANCY
GOODS · THE LATEST NOVELTIES IN GREAT VARIETY

A visit from you will be welcomed whether you buy or not. We are proud of the quality and originality of our goods and delight in showing them.

CHARLES CLEMENTS

Established 1890

Give the kiddies a real Xmas Present
this Year

PHILLIPS Juvenile
Bicycles and Tricycles are not toys. In design, materials and workmanship they are identical with the world-famous Phillips adult models and are guaranteed to give the same, reliable, easy-running and trouble-free service. But why not send for an illustrated folder and let the kiddies choose for themselves?

PHILLIPS

FIRST with all that's

BEST in Bicycles

Models are available with 18-in. or 16-in.
frames for both boys and girls at prices from £9 to £4. tax paid.

J. A. PHILLIPS & CO. LIMITED, SMETHWICK, BIRMINGHAM

By Appointment Wine Merchants

to His Majesty The King

A Solution to the Present Problem

The faultless choice. Harvey's world-famous Wines packed in Cases and delivered to your friends before Christmas, provided that orders are received not later than December 10th.

CASE NUMBER ONE

- 1 bottle Falanda Sherry
Superior rich golden 20/-
- 1 bottle Brown Cap Port
Old tawny 18/6

Total Price £2. 0. 0

CASE NUMBER THREE

- 1 bottle Merienda Sherry
Pale medium dry 18/6
- 1 bottle Shooting Sherry
Full golden 19/-
- 1 bottle Club Port
Old light tawny, special 20/-

Total Price £3. 0. 0

CASE NUMBER TWO

- 1 bottle Merienda Sherry
Pale medium dry 18/6
- 1 bottle White Cap Port
Old full tawny dry 19/-
- 1 bottle Sauternes Supérieur 19/-

Total Price £2. 10. 0

CASE NUMBER FOUR

- 1 bottle Clob, Amontillado Sherry dry 18/6
- 1 bottle Green Cap Port
Fine tawny 19/6
- 1 bottle Hunting Port
Very superior tawny 22/-

Total Price £3. 3. 0

CASE NUMBER SIX: RED AND WHITE BORDEAUX

- 1 bottle Médoc 7/-
- 1 bottle St. Emilion 9/-
- 1 bottle Château La Lagune 1934 13/-
- 1 bottle Graves Supérieur 8/6
- 1 bottle Sauternes Supérieur 10/-
- 1 bottle Château Baret 1947 10/6

Total Price £3. 0. 0

Carriage and Packing inclusive in every case.

We will send a list of all our SPECIAL CHRISTMAS CASES, from 40/- to 110/-, together with our current price list on receipt of a postcard with your name and address.

JOHN HARVEY

& SONS LTD OF BRISTOL: FOUNDED IN 1796

Head Office: 5 Pipe Lane, Bristol 1

London Office: 40 King Street, St. James's, S.W.1.

P.2

For masters teaching

French or Chemic

These shirts are

RADIACademic

McIntyre, Hogg, Marsh & Co. Ltd., London and Manchester

A fine Cigar

Widely known as "the first cigar for the best days," Don Garcias are wrapped with the finest Harana leaf (see label on box) and made in five sizes. In boxes of 25 and smaller packings.

DON GARCIA

"The First Cigar for the best days"

In case of difficulty in obtaining Don Garcias write to Don Garcia Bureau, 11, Bedford Square, London, W.C.1 for name of nearest supplier.

19

Valstar DISTINCTIVE WEATHERWEAR

VALSTAR LTD., Salford 6, Lancs
ALSO AT 314, Regent Street, London, W.1.

For those who appreciate the best*

You'll enjoy this superb new cyder... specially blended for those with a keen taste for quality. Treat yourself and your guests to the finest—"Olde English."

2 6 flagon,
1 5 half-flagon
also 4 bottles, small and giant

Wm. GAYMER & SON LTD
Makers of fine Cyder for over 300 years

OUTSTANDING VALUE
IN LIFE ASSURANCE

ESTABLISHED 1844
EQUITY & LAW
LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY

20, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS, LONDON, W.C.2

This is the wine to say
'YES' to!

La Marche
(MONOPOLE)

A fine red burgundy for the right occasion.

SHIPPED BY BOUCHARD AINE LTD.
Playfair, London, W.1.

—this is the SPECIAL lather, prescribed for super-sensitive skins. Mildly medicated. Soothing. Cooling. A joy to skin which tingles, feels taut or becomes inflamed after ordinary shaving.

Cuticura
SHAVING STICK

277

THE AMBASSADOR OF QUALITY

Wherever world events are recorded, Omega timing instruments are there to make history accurate; at three successive Olympic Games Omega have been the official choice for split second time-keeping. The small events of a human life-time are just as important — trains to catch, friends to meet — an Omega Automatic is the watch to keep you right on time. It winds itself with the motion of the wrist, and has a 36-hour reserve of winding power. A watch like this is an unfailing joy to possess.

OMEGA

Automatic

Shock-resistant · Anti-Magnetic · The chinless self-winding watch yet devised

The Omega Watch Co. (England) Ltd., (Dept C.2), 26/30 Holborn Viaduct, London, E.C.1

"TIS NOT IN MORTALS
TO COMMAND SUCCESS.
BUT WE'LL DO MORE.
SEMPRONIUS, WE'LL DESERVE IT."

—JOSEPH ADDISON.
(1672 to 1719)

—A thought for the New Year.

MARTINS BANK LIMITED

London District Office: 68 Lombard Street, E.C.3.
HEAD OFFICE: WATER ST., LIVERPOOL, 2.

Like the artist
we use skill in blending

We draw the finest whiskies from the famous Scottish distilleries and blend them together in our own special way. The result is "Black & White"—a perfect blend of Scotch, and a thoroughly good drink on all occasions.

'BLACK & WHITE'

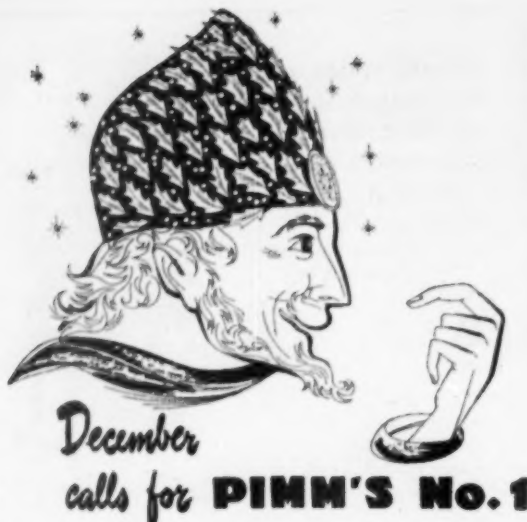

SCOTCH WHISKY

The Secret is in the Blending

By Appointment
to H.M. King George VI

Scotch Whisky Distillers
James Buchanan & Co. Ltd.

The tenth—according to the meaning of its name—and yet the last month of the year, December has only one end in view ... Christmas, the time of St. Nicholas, turkey and wassail. And wassail we enjoy like our Pimm's No. 1! Have you got your Christmas stock in yet?

There's no present like Pimm's. Why not treat yourself to a bottle? This happy blend of gin and choice liqueurs makes Yule convivial and every party a succès fou

THE MOST HEAVENLY DRINK ON EARTH

RATTRAY'S TOBACCOS OLD GOWRIE

Even to-day Old Gowrie keeps its pride of place. A classic example of an old-fashioned pressed all-Virginia tobacco prepared in the loving manner of yesterday—even to-day! It is received with gratitude and punctuality by Britons all over the globe. It follows them wherever they go. Old Gowrie's charm lies within its satisfying coolness and the unsullied fragrance of carefully selected Virginia leaf. The pleasure it gives is not regarded lightly, but is counted among the fewer luxuries.

Or for those who prefer the piquancy and charm of a mixture:

RESERVE

The solace of a good tobacco remains constant and complete and is indeed to be prized among the graver pleasures. There can be no substitute. Such a tobacco is Rattray's Reserve. It owes its rich mellow fullness to the unburied and skilful hands of craftsmen grown old in the service of blending carefully selected leaf. For cool and satisfying smoking Reserve is clearly indicated and is forthwith fully appreciated by those who keep their pipes within reach throughout the waking hours. Hourly devotion does not impair its fragrance or render the palate insouciant to its charms.

A customer writes from Uttoxeter—

"I extend my very best wishes to you and your staff and send many thanks for your continued courtesy and efficiency; last, but not least, for the superlative quality of your tobacco."

A customer writes from London—

"In asking you to send me another pound of Reserve I look forward to much pleasure. Not a little of that pleasure is in watching my especial friends enjoying your excellent tobacco."

To be obtained ONLY from
CHARLES RATTRAY
Tobacco Blender, PERTH, SCOTLAND

Price 75/- per lb. Post Paid. Send 10/- for sample quarter-pound tin. Post Free.

Come inside...

Take a look at this—it's the 'works' of a G.E.C. radio. The part that sees that you get good listening, and go on getting it. That's what really matters in radio, and all G.E.C. sets are designed to take care of it for you—they're built for technical excellence. For instance, this twin-speaker all-wave model BC5837 with three pre-set stations, at £30.9.0 including tax, is something worth seeing—but you really have to listen to it to take in its true quality. Your Approved G.E.C. Dealer will be glad to arrange this for you.

G.E.C. RADIO & TELEVISION —and a good job too!

All that's best in Britain...

Year in, year out, from Cornwall to the lonely islands of the Hebrides, Britain's fishermen fight the unending battle of the sea to reap its harvest with each encounter gleaming new knowledge and experience In the same way the accumulated skill and experience of generations of engineers go into the products of the Standard Motor Company, representing as they do in every detail of their design 'all that's best in Britain.'

The Triumph Renown

THE TRIUMPH MOTOR COMPANY (1945) LTD., COVENTRY
A subsidiary of the Standard Motor Co. Ltd.
London: 27, Davies Street, Grosvenor Square, W.1.
Telephone: MAYfair 6011

TRIUMPH CARS • STANDARD CARS • STANDARD COMMERCIAL VEHICLES • FERGUSON TRACTORS

SECRETS OF BOLS LIQUEURS.

A distillate of finest Dutch caraway seeds, a digestive quite exceptional...

... that's Bolskummel. It is not surprising that the caraway seeds (and other rare herbs) from which it is distilled were once used to pay taxes, for such intriguing flavour and inviting aroma are the birthright only of a liqueur born to high estate. They are in fact the characteristics of a delectable digestive the extra dry quality of which is based on a centuries-old secret.

BOLSKUMMEL

★ The Home of Bols was founded in Amsterdam in 1575 — over thirty years before Rembrandt was born.
Other Bols Liqueurs include Apricot Bols, Cherry Bols and Dry Orange Curaçao.

Burglars make sure

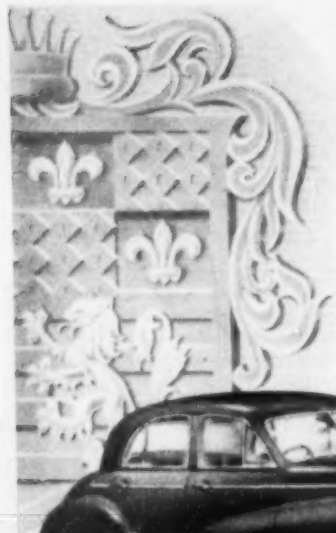

... that a house is worth their attention before they risk entering. You can make sure of protecting your jewellery and important papers if you keep them in a Lloyds Bank Private Safe Deposit.

Call or write for a leaflet describing this service which is not restricted to customers of the Bank.

LLOYDS BANK LIMITED Private Safe Deposits

72 Lombard St., E.C.3.	1-3 Holborn Circus, E.C.1.
185 Baker St., N.W.1.	91 Newington Causeway, S.E.1.
14 Berkeley Square, W.1.	40 Victoria St., S.W.1.
27-28 Whitechapel High St., E.1.

Also at Beournemouth, Brighton, Bristol, Halifax, Huddersfield, Leicester, Liverpool, Newcastle upon Tyne, Northampton, Norwich, Nottingham and Torquay.

Pursuivant

The possession of a Wolseley "Six Eighty" is as eloquent of standing as the shield before a pavilion at The Cloth of Gold. For one can feel a pardonable pride on stepping into this handsome car whose comfort is instanced by innumerable luxury features—a faithful attendant of unfailing reliability.

"Four Fifty": £550
plus £153.10.7.
Purchase Tax.

"Six Eighty": £600
plus £167.8.4.
Purchase Tax.

Gracefully Modern—Distinctly

WOLSELEY

WOLSELEY MOTORS LIMITED, COWLEY, OXFORD.

Overseas Business: Nuffield Reports Ltd., Oxford and 41, Piccadilly, London, W.1. London Showrooms: Eustace Watkins Ltd., 12, Berkeley Street, W.1.

For men by

Lenthéric

"Man about Town"—the welcome gift set for men of excellent taste—containing handy travel size pinch bottles of After Shave Lotion and Brillantine. Price 10/-.

Other Lenthéric coffret presentations for men include:

4 oz. After Shave Lotion, 4 oz. After Shave Powder, Lather Shaving Cream 19/8
4 oz. Men's Brillantine, 4 oz. After Shave Lotion, Lather Shaving Cream 19/8

"Three Musketeers": After Shave Lotion with either Scalp Stimulant and Hairdressing, Scalp Stimulant and "Tanbark" Cologne, or Brillantine and After Shave Powder 25/-

quiet, perfect grooming

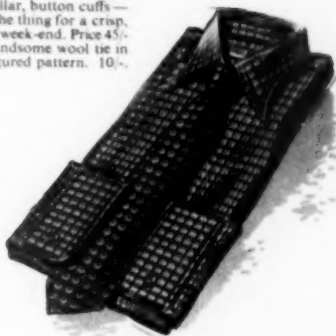

PARIS • 17 OLD BOND STREET, W.1 • NEW YORK

Give him

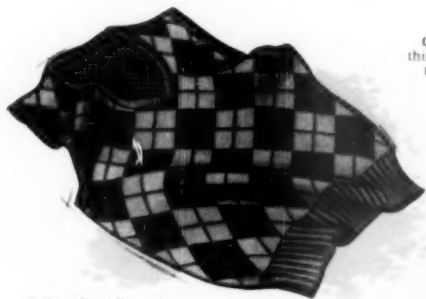

At every Austin Reed shop you will find just the sort of gifts that men like to receive—a few suggestions are shown here. If you are uncertain, send him an Austin Reed Gift Voucher and let him choose something for himself. We will pack your presents for you, post them, and pay the postage to any address in Great Britain or Northern Ireland. Should a present prove unsuitable, it can be exchanged at any Austin Reed shop.

Cheerful checks in a Union material, attached 'polo' collar, button cuffs—just the thing for a crisp, crackling week-end. Price 45/-.
Handsome wool tie in a figured pattern. 10/-.

warm wishes for Christmas

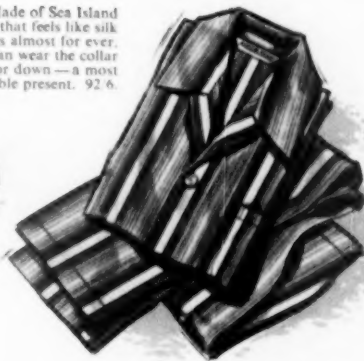

A sleeveless all wool pullover (he really does need a new one), Argyll patterns in all sorts of colour combinations. 40/-.

Gloves are essential in this climate—handsewn tan Cape leather lined with seamless wool—very cosy. 45/6.

Made of Sea Island cotton that feels like silk and lasts almost for ever. You can wear the collar up or down—a most acceptable present. 92/6.

from Austin Reed of Regent Street

You can be sure he's got some battered old things—give him these suede slippers lined with sheepskin. 34/9.

A ribbed, knitted all-wool waistcoat, the wool goes all the way round and keeps the back warm. The pockets are lined. 84/-.

Every sock drawer needs replenishing. These are all wool, plain or in fancy patterns; ribbed or in a plain stitch—from 5/8.

The green turf firm underfoot . . . and the flicker of a club-head as it swings full circle. The beckoning flap of a flag over the rise ahead . . . and the fir-scented breeze stirring the waiting, wicked rough. The shoulder muscles slipping smoothly back to a comfortable fatigue . . . the grateful few moments of appraisal before it's time to play through. And for perfection one thing more—

NUMBER SEVEN

Abdulla 'Virginia' No. 7, 20 for 3/6 • ALSO Abdulla Turkish and Egyptian

ABDULLA AND CO. LIMITED • 173 NEW BOND STREET • LONDON W1

What happened to the doctor's car?

One autumn night he was called out to a long job. When he came down to his car he noticed a 'nip' in the air. It was an early frost — and it had well and truly nipped his engine. Cylinder block cracked right through! He had intended to get some anti-freeze later on, but the frost beat him to it. That damage could happen to your car any time now. Don't put off that filling up with Bluecol. This safe anti-freeze is used by thousands of wise motorists—and no engine protected by Bluecol has ever suffered frost damage. Ask your garage.

SMITHS  BLUECOL
The SAFE Anti-Freeze

SMITHS MOTOR ACCESSORIES LIMITED, CRICKLEWOOD WORKS, LONDON, N.W.2
THE MOTOR ACCESSORY DIVISION OF S. SMITH & SONS (ENGLAND) LIMITED

MACKENZIE'S
FINO PERLA
SHERRY (PRODUCE OF SPAIN)

A Splendid Aperitif

FROM YOUR WINE MERCHANT

"The Best of the Bunch"
MACKENZIE & CO. LTD. 20, EASTCHEAP, LONDON

GO anywhere...

DO anything

The versatility of the Land-Rover is really amazing. A four-wheel-drive tractor, a delivery wagon, a mobile power plant and a fast, economical vehicle on the road—the Land-Rover is all these things rolled into one. It is the ideal maid-of-all-work for farms or factories, and is supplied with right- or left-hand drive as required.

LAND- ROVER

Britain's most versatile vehicle

Made by The Rover Company Limited, Solihull, Birmingham, England

She let her hair down!

Once upon a time Sir Lancelot asked fair Guinevere imprisoned in the tower, but try as he would, he could not gain entry to rescue her. But—Guinevere let her hair down!

Up climbed the ever-gallant Lancelot and said, "What a pity to discourage your lovely tresses!" Quoth Guinevere, "First not, noble knight, I'll soon put my hair in order with

The good 'tempered'
"KIRBIGRIP"

7 Shades, 4 Sizes, for all hair styles

Also PINS, HAIR PINS, SAFETY PINS, NEEDLES, CURLERS, Etc.
Obtainable from all good Stores
Made in England by Kirby Beard & Co. Ltd., Birmingham, London and Redditch.

1326

Keep fit on TUROG
BREAD

AND THEN —

FOX'S Glacier
MINTS

A pleasure to send — a joy to receive . . .

Revive pleasant memories — Post Greetings this Christmas to friends and relatives at home or abroad. They will KNOW they are not forgotten when they receive your

CHRISTMAS CARD OR CALENDAR

Issued by the GREETING CARD & CALENDAR ASSOCIATION

SEE HOW IT PAYS TO INSIST ON

MAZDA
the outshining light

MAZDA LAMPS AND LIGHTING EQUIPMENT

Made in England by Leaders in Lighting

The British Thomson-Houston Co. Ltd., Member of the A.E.I. Group of Companies

4306

At last —
a bed that I can stretch on!

Give your dog a Van Hal, where he can stretch in comfort and enjoy that health-giving sleep which adds active years to his normal span of life.

VAN HAL DOG COT

In two sizes: Toy 75/-, Major 95/-, Carr. Paid. Packs flat for travelling.
Send for illustrated brochure MILLERS LTD. TEDBURN, EXETER

A fragrant thought which lingers on...

Bronnley
FOR THE BEAUTY BATH

... Bronnley Beauty Soaps in attractive three tablet Gift Boxes . . .
... Beauty Bath Crystals and Dusting Powders . . .
... charming Bath Luxury presentation Coffrets . . .

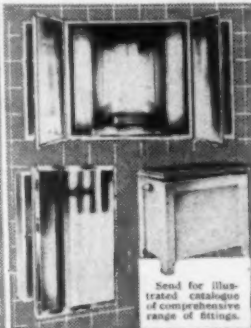

M. Bronnley & Co. Ltd.
Tailor Soap Makers
by Appointment

CLOTHS
SCARVES
RUGS

KYNOCH
Keith, Scotland

VAXAL
MADE
MODERN BATHROOM FURNISHINGS

THE HALL-MARK OF SUPERIORITY

Send for illustrated catalogue of comprehensive range of fittings.

S. J. DOWNHAM & CO. LTD.
PEMBURY, KENT

Tomatoes on surprise
—from Main Cookery
Book, obtainable from Gas Showrooms

Have present day rations made good cooking
a thing of the past?

IN THE MAIN,
COOKING IS BETTER THAN IT'S EVER BEEN

Better, because: everything about a Main Gas Cooker is what the housewife woman has dreamed of for years—its heavenly ease in operation, its details, its looks. A Main sets the standard of modernity in any kitchen... Ask to see the latest models at your gas showrooms.

gas cookers

Dufrais Special Vinegars give you all the fresh, natural flavour of the herbs and spices from which they are produced.

They provide a happy means of imparting piquant, appetising flavours to dishes of every kind.

DUFRAIS
Special VINEGARS

DUFRAIS & CO. LTD., 87 SOUTH LAMBETH ROAD, LONDON, S.W.8

See!
NO FLEX

It's the Walter NO-CORD ELECTRIC IRON AND BOARD

Flex shows you up. Twists, frays, may expose naked electric wire.

With ordinary electric irons you risk scorching precious fabrics if you forget to up-end the iron (and who doesn't sometimes?).

IRONING is so much easier when there's no flex to drag, catch on the table, soil garments, get twisted and frayed. You never need to lift the Walter No-Cord, thus cutting out the heaviest labour in ironing. You're free to do your best work in less time. Post the coupon for leaflet giving details.

Walter No-Cord has no flex, is always safe. No tressome up-ending. It slips easily back into the asbestos lined contact and heating unit on the board.

— CUT OUT — POST TODAY

Send me your leaflet about the
WALTER NO-CORD ELECTRIC IRON AND BOARD
£9.15n. plus £1.10n. P.T. Easy Terms available
Also the WALTER GEORGINA £5.5n. Inc. P.T.
(USE BLOCK CAPITALS)

NAME

ADDRESS

J. & H. WALTER LTD., 19 Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2. Tel: 78841gax 0213-0-6

Norseman Dual Reversible

—two coats in one

Norseman braves
all weathers

A. B. HARGREAVES & CO., LTD.
Vykings Works Chorley Lancs

Collectors' Pieces

OLD CHINA
from Chelsea...

OLD CHAIR
by Hepplewhite...

OLD WHISKY
by

OLD ANGUS

A Noble Scotch—Blended for Connoisseurs

ALL PRESENT AND CORRECT

Clothes won't get misaid when they are identified with Cash's Woven Names.

1 dozen 5/6d.
6 dozen 7/6d.
12 dozen 10/6d.

Obtainable at drapers and outfitters

★ All orders now promptly executed.

Cash's
WOVEN NAME TAPES

J. & J. CASH LTD. COVENTRY

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

A case containing

One bottle Cockburn Ruby Port
One bottle Light Golden Spanish Sherry
One bottle Moët & Chandon Non Vintage
One half bottle Lemon Hart Rum can be sent to your friends for £4 (case & carriage paid) by

GREEN'S LTD

Wine & Cigar Merchants

37 & 38 Royal Exchange, London, E.C.3
Also "Call of the East" Burma Cheroots

Player's
"No Name"
Tobacco.

Blended originally for an exclusive circle of pipe smokers, this special blend now enjoys an increasing demand created by the recommendations of its devotees.

It pays to say

LIGHTER FUEL

10 oz. bottle with pourer cork
1/6

Major capsule
6d.

Minor capsule 1 1/2d.

ANGLO-AMERICAN OIL COMPANY LIMITED

Take care of your Hair

Rowland's Macassar Oil is made to a very special formula, which has stood the test of time. For since its introduction in 1793, Rowland's Macassar
Oil has been the choice of discerning men and women. They have found—as you will find—that Rowland's is pre-eminent for caring for the hair; as a dressing that imparts sheen and gloss; as a tonic that promotes strong, natural growth. In two forms—Red for dark hair;
Golden for fair.

—Since 1793

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL

the choice of discerning men & women

IFCO BATHROOM
FURNITURE IS SUPREME

Stocked
by All Leading Stores

LIST FREE FROM
IFCO LTD LIVERPOOL 3

An Appeal worthy of YOUR consideration

Of all the charities constantly brought before your notice, few, if any, have such a heart-felt, world-wide appeal as that of the

BRITISH EMPIRE CANCER CAMPAIGN FOR CANCER RESEARCH

Patron: H.M. The King
President: H.R.H. The Duke of Gloucester

The elimination and cure of cancer concerns everyone—everywhere. Cancer, a disease known since the dawn of civilisation, affects the entire human race. A certain measure of effective treatment has already been perfected, but this is not enough—cancer must be eliminated by prevention. To achieve this noble end, funds are urgently required.

AIMS AND OBJECTS

- (1) To further researches into the causes of cancer.
- (2) To co-ordinate the efforts of many scattered research workers throughout the world; to train other workers and enlist the services of proved experts.
- (3) To pool, sift and evaluate the knowledge gained in many fields of cancer research.
- (4) To improve methods of cancer diagnosis and perfect new methods of effective treatment.
- (5) To discover further preventive measures against cancer.

Legacy forms and Deed of Covenant forms supplied on request.

Please send your gift to Sir Charles Lillbury, Hon. Treasurer, (Dept. P. T.)

BRITISH EMPIRE CANCER CAMPAIGN

11 Grosvenor Crescent, London, S.W.1

Telephone: SLOane 5158

or write for literature on the work of the Campaign.

* When sending your contribution, please mention the name and date of issue of this paper, so that every penny of Appeals Expenditure may be used to the benefit of further research.

This year's most welcome Gift—for lasting good will and good coffee

the HOTPOINT ELECTRIC PERCOLATOR

How joyfully your friends will welcome a HOTPOINT electric percolator this Christmas. Imagine—clear, delicious, refreshing coffee, every time, any time, without fuss or bother. Like all HOTPOINT appliances, it is expertly made, beautifully finished in polished chromium, a positive joy to handle, and designed to last a lifetime.

Polished chromium with black fittings.

Capacity 8 coffee cups

HOTPOINT APPLIANCES

hard wings to housework

REFRIGERATORS • FIRES •
KETTLES • PERCOLATORS •
TOASTERS • IRONS • PLATE
WARMERS • FANS • BOILING RINGS • WATER HEATERS • HOME LAUNDRY EQUIPMENT

PRICE 90/- No P.T.

Suitable for AC or DC mains

Hotpoint

DOMESTIC APPLIANCES

The Hotpoint Electric Appliances Co. Ltd., London, W.C.2.
Member of the A.E.I. Group of Companies

"What is the best thing for my cold?"

"SEROCALCIN
is the answer—there's nothing like it for the treatment or prevention of colds."

There's nothing like a bad cold for reducing your spirits to zero. With coughs and sneezes all around, don't take chances, take 3 Serocalcin tablets now and 3 times daily, and your cold should quickly clear up. Do you know that many habitual sufferers from colds have found that by taking 2 Serocalcin tablets daily for thirty days they secure immunity from colds for months? Serocalcin is absolutely safe for children as well as for adults.

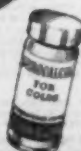

Treatment pack of 20 tablets 3/9
Immunising pack of 60 tablets 9/3
Obtainable at all chemists

FOR THE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT OF COLDS

THERE'S NOTHING LIKE
Serocalcin

FREE! Write today to Harwood Laboratories Ltd., Watford, for a helpful booklet "Immunity from Colds."

"Serocalcin" is a Reg. Trade Mark of Harwood Laboratories Ltd., Watford, Herts.

What do you know about ENO?

DO YOU KNOW that a glass of ENO will quickly correct the effects of over-eating and drinking? Do you know that refreshing ENO is one of the finest remedies for a sick headache and that heavy liverish feeling—and that it will remove the cause of a dry nasty mouth in the morning? Keep ENO handy, always.

Eno's
'Fruit Salt'

SPECIALLY RECOMMENDED

for IRREGULAR ACTION, SICK HEADACHE, LIVERISHNESS, BILIOUSNESS, HEARTBURN, etc.
27d. Regular Size—Family Size 5/11d.

The words "ENO", "ENO'S" and "FRUIT SALT" are registered Trade Marks.

State and Private Charity

... Musings of a Mineral Water Manufacturer

ACCORDING to the Drain Return the amount taken for Social Services from the tax payer and the rate payer, which was about £30,000,000 at the turn of the century, had risen in 1930 to £400,000,000. The amount that is raised today for public assistance must be about double the 1930 figure, and yet judging by the appeals one receives the need for private charity must be greater than ever. This is no strange as to warrant a Royal Commission to enquire into the whole thing. Meanwhile we suggest that we merchants and manufacturers be set free to make all the money we can even if the Chancellor of the Exchequer takes the half of it away from us. Let him restore honest money, free the foreign exchanges, give up government bulk buying, and restore merchandising to the merchants. In short, return to free trade. Let us make money even if we are not allowed to keep it. This is pretty well the Socialism of the late Philip Snowden. We all know there is considerable abuse of the Social Services, and we all know freedom can be abused. Given the fear of God almost any system will work, and without this fear of God no system will work. We should not unduly worry if Sir Hartley Shawcross and his friends "are the masters now" if they remember that they have a Master in Heaven.

ROSS'S
BELFAST

Years of Fun with MiniCine

IT'S A MOVIE PROJECTOR
IT'S A STILL PROJECTOR
IT'S BOTH IN ONE

100 Films to choose from, 2/6 each

Send for free illustrated folder

MARTIN LUCAS LTD.
HOLLINWOOD - LANCs.

Direct to you from the Holford River. Send
1/6 for 25 medium sized Holford Oysters
The Duchy of Cornwall
Oyster Farm
PORT NAVELO, COR. FALMOUTH
CORNWALL

W. & T. RESTELL
Auctioneers of Wines,
Spirits and Cigars

Stocks in town or country included in Auctions throughout the year
9 UNION COURT, OLD BROAD ST., E.C.2
Telephone: London - Wull 7 364

ON EVERYBODY'S TONGUE
THIS WINTER!

The Popular Medicated Pastilles
for VOICE, THROAT & CHEST
TEASDALE & CO. LTD., CARLISLE

20/-
Bottle

FOR CHRISTMAS

DRY FLY SHERRY is the best appetizer and is a gracious welcome to your guests. From your Wine Merchant or:

Findlater Mackie Todd & Co. Ltd.

Wine and Spirit Merchants to H.M. The King - Wigmore Street, W.1

SHARPE'S CLASSIC
Christmas
Cards

W. N. SHARPE LTD BRADFORD

Van Heusen

THE WORLD'S BEST

Shirts and Collars

POST YOUR LETTER TO SANTA CLAUS

THE FAMOUS

JAMES
JUVENILE MODELS

There's lots of fun and healthy exercise with the James "Safety-Bike" tri-cycle.
For children of three to five years buy a "FLIPPER" - and these of five to nine years will require a "BROWNIE".
We also offer children's bicycles of first quality - all are strongly built of the finest materials. The nearest James dealer will supply.

★ POST YOUR CARD TODAY for a copy of the James Picture and Prize Book - FREE to all children
THE JAMES CYCLE CO. LTD.
GREY - BIRMINGHAM 11

Slowly does it!

'You are going to tell me' said the Vicar briskly, 'that your machine will fly at six hundred miles an hour. You are going to talk of speed and progress, hinting perhaps that I do not move with the times.'

'For my part' the Vicar went on, 'I am going to sing the praises of things that go slow and do not change. Yes, I refer to Three Nuns. Admirable, unhurried tobacco! Cool, leisurely leaf! Each coiled disc dedicated to long-drawn, fragrant minutes. In all, a tobacco that has weathered the years wisely. As excellent today as when I first started smoking it in gayer days. Will you have a pipeful? I am sure your aeroplane will wait.'

Three Nuns

ORIGINAL BLEND EMPIRE BLEND

Stephen Mitchell & Son, Branch of The Imperial Tobacco Co. (of Great Britain & Ireland), Ltd., Glasgow

NITROGEN

IN 1898, Sir William Crookes warned the world that the human race might soon starve because intensive cultivation was draining the soil of essential plant foods. Yet today, agricultural land has become more productive than ever, for the chemist has learned the necessity for returning to the soil the nitrogen and other elements taken up by the plant in its growth. Nitrogen is a colourless, inert gas that forms four-fifths of the air we breathe. Hundreds of thousands of tons of it are available over every square mile of the earth's surface, but it must first be "trapped" and then combined with other elements before plants can absorb it in the form of fertilizers.

Every day, the great synthetic ammonia factories of I.C.I. convert hundreds of tons of nitrogen from the air into a range of fertilizers that have helped to make British farming the most efficient in the world. And not fertilizers only: I.C.I. also uses nitrogen to make explosives and plastics, resins, paints and leathercloth. I.C.I.'s nylon and other synthetic textile fibres contain nitrogen. So, too, do many of the drugs which I.C.I. contributes to modern medicine.

DO CHILDREN TALK T.I.?

A small boy on a tricycle. Nothing special about that — unless he thinks he's a dirt-track rider, when you have to look out. But a couple of generations ago there was no T.I., and most small boys had nothing more exciting to ride than a tea-tray. No trikes, no children's bikes, no rocking boats, or chutes, or slides, or climbing frames, or half the things clever people manufacture from (as it happens) T.I. materials. No much help from Mother, either, with no T.I. to help her run the house.

Yet even to-day . . . funny thing . . . you hardly ever hear a child mention T.I.

The letters T.I. stand for Tube Investments Ltd., of The Adelphi, London, W.C.2 (Trafalgar 5633). They also stand for the thirty producing companies of the T.I. Group, whose specialist skills are co-ordinated to the general field of light engineering.

THE SURNAME OF A THOUSAND THINGS

Glayva

SCOTCH LIQUEUR

Warm and genial, friendly and kind, a drink to linger over
... on all occasions
of hospitality.

RONALD MORRISON & CO LTD EDINBURGH

Questions asked about Life Assurance: 4

How does a Pension Scheme for employees work?

More and more companies, large and small, are turning to Pension and Life Assurance Schemes to provide for their employees. Why? Because it is the safe, economical way to take care of the future. Even when on a modest scale, the benefits are an important addition to State pensions, allowing for the little comforts over and above the bare necessities of life. And a Pension and Life Assurance Scheme does something that the State scheme does not do—it provides a substantial lump sum for the employee's dependants in the event of his early death. All this at no undue cost either to employers or employed, since a Scheme can be 'made-to-measure' for any group. Here are some actual examples of the benefits:—

Twenty-four Years' Service led to good rewards for Mr. R. B. who had been with his firm for 18 years when a Pension Scheme was started in 1930. In 1936, at 65, he retired on a yearly pension of £180. He is still receiving this pension. His own contributions amounted to only £187. 4s., but to date he has been paid over £2000.

For His Wife's Sake, Mr. A. L. decided, shortly before his retirement, to exchange the pension due to him for a reduced pension payable to himself or his wife as long as either should live. Four years after retiring Mr. A. L. died—but his wife still enjoys this pension and it will continue throughout her lifetime.

Mr. S. M. died suddenly, less than 12 months after joining the Scheme arranged by his employers. His widow at once received the Life Assurance benefit of £325; and because of special provisions of the Scheme, she became entitled to £50 a year for all the 36 years until her husband would have reached normal retiring age.

Pension Schemes can include any number of employees from two or three to 10,000 or more. The money is held in trust. Benefits vary with payments; usually the members themselves make a contribution and the employer pays the balance. A Pension Scheme means protection and peace of mind for every man and woman concerned and happier working all round.

LIFE ASSURANCE

the way to save and to safeguard

ISSUED BY THE LIFE OFFICES' ASSOCIATION, LONDON

Strong...

Pressure proofed by patented process and tested at every stage. Only proven leads go into Venus Drawing Pencils

SMOOTH...

A patented colloidal process removes all grit and impurities—they must be smooth ACCURATE...

Accurate through and through—graded and tested by experts. Venus Drawing Pencils make the right mark every time

THE PENCIL WITH THE CRACKLE FINISH

VENUS
Perfect PENCILS

THE VENUS PENCIL CO. LIMITED, LOWER CLAPTON ROAD, LONDON, E.S

Smoke
Wavy
Navy

Pure Navy Cut of Pre-War quality

GODFREY PHILLIPS LTD
MANUFACTURERS and GUARANTORS

2 OZ. AIRTIGHT TIN 8/10
1 OZ. FOILED PACKET 4/5

Also ready rubbed

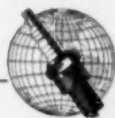

ROLLS-ROYCE

are supplied with

CHAMPION

The World's Favourite

Sparkling Plug

CHAMPION SPARKING PLUG COMPANY LIMITED, FELTHAM, MIDDLESEX

We build in steel

BANISTER, WALTON & CO. LTD.

STRUCTURAL STEELWORK
RIVETED & WELDED

LONDON-02 Victoria St., S.W.1 MANCHESTER 17-Trafford Pk. BIRMINGHAM 18-61/63 Western Rd.

Do have some... only Maxwell House gives you the full joy of coffee-drinking!

Hear this... the tin says "fre-s-sh"!

You listen the next time you pierce the air-tight top of a Maxwell House Coffee tin—that "fre-s-sh" proves the coffee inside has kept its just-ground freshness.

And because Maxwell House Coffee is so fresh it has a rich, rich fragrance which doubles your coffee-drinking delight!

You taste this EXTRA-flavour!

A big thing in your life... the extra-flavour of mellow Maxwell House Coffee! It's the result of the perfect roasting, the skilful blending of many fine, 100% pure coffees.

No one coffee could be as good as Maxwell House. Taste it yourself and see!

MAXWELL HOUSE COFFEE

"Good to the last drop"

ANOTHER FINE PRODUCT OF ALFRED BIRD & SONS LTD. BIRMINGHAM

Printed in England by Messrs. Bradbury, Agnew & Co., Limited, at 15-B, Phoenix Place, Mount Pleasant, W.C.1. and published by them weekly, with one additional summer issue and one additional winter issue, at 14, Boulevard Street, London, E.C.4.—WEDNESDAY, December 6, 1930.